DE SUMICHRAST TELLS OF WAR-TIME LONDON

Streets Sea of Khaki and Black—Girls Everywhere—Stories of Bravery.

Boston, Feb. 10.—Prof. F. O. de Sumichrast, a former member of the Harvard faculty, and at one time president of the Victorian Club, now resident in London, has sent to the members of that organization an interesting letter giving conditions in London with some other impressions of the European war.

"Our men have no doubt of their ability to break through the German lines when the moment comes. They are also convinced that no efforts on the part of the Germans can carry them through our lines."

"I received a very interesting present from one of the Belgians. These men come to England in fairly large numbers when on leave from the trenches, and some of them come around to see me."

"The last lot brought me the nose of a shrapnel-shell, and said: 'This shell came into our outpost trench just as a lady was visiting us. We had just time to snatch her into a shelter when it burst. She was unhurt.'"

"I treasure that shell. I can tell you, and we forthwith drank Her Plucky Majesty's health."

"Sometimes I try to recall what London looked like, say in July, 1914. The change, although we are to some extent accustomed to it, is so great as to impress me even now."

"The nurses are superb. They all work hard and brighten the hospitals and their patients. Many ladies who would have looked scornfully at you a couple of years ago had you suggested manual work to them are now scrubbing floors, laundrying, making fires and doing all sorts of menial work, pushing bath-chairs with legless men in them, or supporting those who want to try to walk."

"If you could just look into one of the vast munition works, now found in every part of the country, you would see thousands of women, of all classes of society, from the highest to the lowest, side by side busy making shells and fuses. There is no stopping, no delaying, scarcely a word exchanged. They toil away for hours at a stretch, and go home tired out but happy, for they have helped to save lives at the front."

"Women, indeed, are everywhere now. Board a tram and a woman conductor takes your penny. Start for the Underground, and a woman sells you your ticket and another punches it. Go by rail, and again a woman is there, able to post you with regard to changes of trains, while another grabs your bag and carries it off jauntily to your carriage."

"There is another aspect which I must not pass over: the prevalence of mourning. While many have avoided wearing black and put on merely a band of crepe, yet the number of women in black is saddening. Everywhere the truth is impressed upon you that this war is being won at the cost of noble lives, and you realize that yet many more must be offered up."

"Why Men Do Not Enlist. 'You will not, I am sure, mistake my meaning when I say that there are complaints when I feel almost guilty of bloodshed, because I have been the direct means of sending so many men to the front. It comes over me when I am praised for the success of the recruiting work, and it rather dims the satisfaction I might otherwise feel. Yet I know that since I am not acceptable myself for active service, the best service I can render is to recruit men.'"

"You may wonder how it is that so many single men have kept back. The reason I consider is the wrong teaching of the demagogues for many years past. They have talked of the 'nobility' of the individual and of his claims on the State, but never of the duties of the individual or of the just claims of the State upon his services in time of need. Consequently a large number of young men saw no reason whatever why they should go and get hurt or killed for the sake of the country. It was easier and pleasanter to bag the jobs of the more patriotic and to frequent moving picture shows."

"But while much has been said about the slacker, relatively little has been said of the man who springs to arms at the first call. I tell you it was an inspiring sight to see the recruits come in, young and old they rushed to the recruiting office, and the doctors were kept busy examining them and the rest of the staff attending them. In my own district we raised a battalion, 1,100 strong, in one week."

"Inspiring, too, the way in which the men went to work. I asked a lad where he lived before he joined and what was his family. 'At Hamman-smith, sir; and there are five of us beside my mother, father and three brothers, one killed; father and the rest of us at the front. The father was forty-five, said he was thirty-five, and got in.'"

"You will remember Capt. Talbot, who was our consul some years ago. All his three sons are in the army. The second one is now in hospital here, and when he comes out will have his commission. The eldest is a captain and fits the trenches, and the youngest is there also, as a lieutenant expert in bomb-throwing."

"Prince of Wales a Plucky Chap. 'There is, of course, the usual amount of criticism of Generals, the average person, blissfully ignorant of matters military and of the peculiar conditions of this war, feeling and saying that we ought to have a victory a week, with the enemy running as fast as may be till it drowns in the Baltic.'"

"Whatever may be said regarding certain commanders one officer, though not in command, is simply idolized by the men. He is a young fellow, barely twenty-one, and as plucky as they make them. He is continually in the front trenches, running the same risks as the men and sharing their hardships, while setting an example of cool courage that is absolutely priceless. At home he is Prince of Wales; in France he is adored by the troops."

"And there are the Americans. All here are one with us, and more than one is fighting with us in Flanders, France and the Dardanelles. Do not ask me how they got in; Americans have a way of getting there, you know, and they meant to be in it and fight for the good cause. Numbers are helping as physicians, surgeons, ambulance drivers, Red Cross men and so on. One of my former students had his ambulance 'ridled' in the first months of the war, and is now making munitions; another commands a machine gun section; others are in the American-battalion in France, and so on."

"We have a Harvard Club War Relief Fund here, and at the meetings Lord Bryce, and J. work with other Harvard men. We have been able to work, pushing bath-chairs with legless men in them, or supporting those who want to try to walk."

"Do the members of the Victoria Club bring electric torches and hand-lamps to the dinners, so as to see their way home? We do not have dinners here; all club meetings of that kind ceased with the war, but we still have to go out, and then the handy little lighters come in. It is impossible to describe the darkness of London and its suburbs; it must be seen to be believed. Few lamps and these darkened; the curbs whitened to enable you to avoid stumbling—most of the time, not always. The shops darkened, or £10 and £25 fines if light shows."

"Coal Branch Station, Feb. 8.—The death occurred at Keynon, R. I., on January 26th of Mr. Fidele J. Arsenault after a lingering illness. Mr. Arsenault was formerly a resident of this place. He is a son of Mr. Jerome Arsenault, of Adamsville."

"Mrs. Frank Perry and two children went to Moncton Saturday where they will in future reside."

"Mrs. Wm. Donnelly and daughter of Bartibogue spent last week with friends here."

"Mr. and Mrs. James W. Spencer are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a baby boy."

"Mrs. Patrick Swift spent Saturday in Moncton."

"Mr. and Mrs. J. Hudson of South Branch were guests of Mr. A. Hudson recently."

"Mrs. Thomas Boers had the misfortune to fall last week and broke an arm. She is now in Moncton under medical care."

Its a Treat

To chew King George Navy Plug. Made from pure, rich tobacco, every ounce of which is carefully selected, then blended according to our process.

King George's NAVY PLUG

Has a delicious, non-irritating sweet taste—and it is universally recognized that sweetened tobacco is much more healthful than the old fashion "strong", unsweetened plug.

It leaves a long, lingering flavor and guards the teeth from the ravages of "acid mouth", the cause of nearly all tooth decay.

Permanent Cure of Piles Certified by Minister

Sixteen Years Ago This Man Was Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment—Had Suffered Keenly for Twelve Years.

You might almost say that there is only one actual cure for Piles and that is Dr. Chase's Ointment. Every day this conclusion is corroborated by reports from persons who had tried one thing and another without success. Some have even been operated on, only to have the old trouble return, and finally to obtain cure by use of this ointment.

Why not avoid waste of time, waste of money and needless risk with operations by using Dr. Chase's Ointment at once?

Some will say "that is all very well for itching Piles, but my trouble is from bleeding Piles." Well, here is a letter from a man who had bleeding Piles for twelve years, and suffered most keenly. For sixteen years he has had no return of the old trouble, and naturally considers the cure permanent.

Mr. O. B. Peters, Salmon Arm, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with bleeding Piles for about twelve years, and suffered everything but death. I was so bad I could scarcely walk about, and though I tried many things, could get no relief. At that time I lived at Sharbot Lake, Ont., and a friend advised me to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, saying he would guarantee cure. Less than two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. That is sixteen years ago, and I am O.K. yet, so think you can consider the cure permanent. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment enough, as it saved me from a great deal of pain and suffering."

Rev. W. J. Beamish, Salmon Arm, B.C., writes: "I have been acquainted with Mr. O. B. Peters, and have always found him to be a man of his word. I can therefore most thoroughly endorse what Mr. Peters has written here, and the merits and value of Dr. Chase's Ointment. A test of Dr. Chase's Ointment will soon convince you of its merits. Relief comes almost immediately, and cure follows persistent treatment. For sale by all dealers. Sample box free if you mention this paper and write direct to Edmondson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

No peat is employed in the curing of the malt for McCallum's Perfection Scotch, and the "smoky" taste, so objectionable in many Scotch whiskies, is noticeably absent. Perfection, with all the "elegance" of a distinctively high-class Scotch, is a mellow, epicurean beverage, with a distinct appeal to the cultivated palate.
