A YEAR OF WAR

YESTERDAY, August 4, was the first anniversary of the declaration of war by Great Britain against Germany.
The fact that the war is still in progress, and that no glimpse of its ending is yet even faintly revealed, makes it futile to moralize on the results up to the present or to speculate on the final outcome. So far as Great Britain is concerned, however, the outstanding feature of the year of war has been the manifestation of the complete solidarity of the Empire. Britons (or by whatever general name may be called the people of the various colonies, dominions and possessions that form the constituent parts of the British Empire) have come from every quarter of the globe in response to the call of their Emperor and King. No more striking evidence is possible of the justness of British rule, and of the far-flung influence of British prestige.

In new Brunswick the day was to be generally observed as a holiday, and it was so kept in St. Andrews. However, as the BEACON goes to press the day before its date of publication, we are unable to give an account in this issue of the form the observance took in Town and in the Province.

PROGRESS OF THE WAR
[July 27 to August 1]
The past week has yielded no news of changes in the western arena. The European conflict, and the paucity of news can only indicate the impasse of the opposing forces in this section, a condition which is appropriately styled a "stalemate." The chief interest of the week's hostilities centred in the eastern theatre, where the Teutonic forces have continued to drive the Russians back. Warsaw had not actually been evacuated at the week's close; but that event was expected shortly of a mastery of the city by the German and people of Russia view with calm resolution the necessity of retiring before the invading Teutons; and their determination to hold the new front which they seem at last definitely to have chosen, and to make the preparation necessary to resume the offensive, is plainly apparent in all the reports sent out from Petrograd.
German ascendancy over such a widened area as it now commands will be difficult long to maintain, however complete their preparation, however absolute their present resources. The worst that can be said, from the point of view of the Allies, is that the events of the past week tend to the prolongation of the war; but of their ultimate success no doubt can be entertained. As German militarism reveals more and more its hideous character, so increases the determination of those who are opposing it, to crush it forever.

Absolutely no news was made public during the week by the official News Bureau, of the operations at the Dardanelles; and it is not at all unlikely that the week was one of rest, recuperation, and of further preparation. In view of the Russian retirement in Poland, the importance of forcing the passage of the Dardanelles becomes greater; and it is to be hoped that this consummation will not be delayed much longer.

collected from the persons whose names appear in the list in another column.
The money subscribed was actually paid in the total amount being over $2,280.
This sum will permit of the purchase of two machine guns in addition to that provided for by the vote of the Town Council, and a surplus remains which will form a nucleus for further contributions either for machine guns or any other military purpose necessary. So far as concerns contributions in money and supplies, the people of St. Andrews have not been behind those of any other town of equal (or even somewhat greater) size in Canada. And while our people have already given so freely, not one in the community is unmindful of the fact that, as the war progresses, further calls will be made, especially for the Patriotic Fund; and those calls will meet with the same generous response.

RECRUITING RALLY
At this writing we are unable to anticipate the trend of the speeches to be made at the Court House on Wednesday afternoon, but the supreme requirement of the moment is more men, and more men. We shall not desist from our efforts to urge the people of this section of Charlotte County to emulate the example set in so many other parts of Canada (notably at the patriotic meeting in Halifax on July 29) and have a recruiting rally that will bring many more of our young men forward to serve their King and Country.
Machine guns, by all means; but men to serve them as well. The longer our young men hold back, the longer will the war be prolonged. We hope this will have been strongly impressed upon the people at the Court House on Wednesday; but if not, then we must again call upon our parliamentary representatives to take the lead in a prompt and vigorous recruiting campaign.

UNSIGHTLY STREETS
THE attention of the Street Committee of the Town Council, and of the townspeople concerned, is respectfully called to the disfigurement of the streets by great quantities of paper, fruit peelings, and other kinds of unsightly filth and detritus. The present appearance of some of the streets is positively disgraceful.
The Post Office corner receives the most liberal contribution of newspapers, postal wrappers and suchlike; and the Town might well provide a receptacle for the same, if those who thoughtlessly scatter them about cannot be instructed to abandon their pernicious practice. Where so many citizens, with commendable pride, are taking so much pains in keeping the sidewalks and streets in front of their houses in such perfect order, it is a matter of course that they should be in different and careless, and do what they can to make the streets unsightly. Pride in the tidy appearance of the Town is a virtue that specially needs cultivation and extension at the present time.

CANADA'S SACRIFICES CANADA has not dealt in billions of dollars and millions of men, but Canada has nevertheless made commensurate war sacrifices in money, suffering and blood. All the world has stood ready with ambitious imaginations for any suggestion from the European chancelleries and applauded unreservedly when the complete successes of the billion dollar loans have been announced, but Canada and its patriotic offerings, under the most peculiar circumstances, have had scant notice.
Even her American neighbours seem to have forgotten that big game of spirit is as moving as big game of numbers.

The temper of the Canadian soldier has already been proven and approved in the theatre of war, but the same bravery of the home people in facing a rapidly rising public debt has a much less spectacular setting. During June alone there was an increase of no less than $17,970,090, and the increase in the past 12 months has been $130,906,086, making the total net debt $450,287,721, or nearly $50 per head for a young government. These sacrifices made at a critical period of Canada's life for a war across the seas, calling for stamp taxes and increased tariffs, in addition to exposing for slaughter the flower of the manhood of the country are highly idealistic. France, England and even Belgium are fighting and making sacrifices—but no greater sacrifices in proportion—in the midst of a struggle that actually threatens their existence, but Canada is giving largely of her best blood and money without any thought that physically at least, she is in danger from the Teuton.
Both life and money are more precious, too, to a country just entering upon a period of national development.

MAJOR NORTON GRIFFITHS, M. P.
The last news received in St. John regarding Mr. Norton Griffiths, M. P., was that he had become a major in mounted troops and was in training for war. Advices from London now state that in connection with the $50,000,000 railway construction contract just secured by his firm in New South Wales, Major Norton Griffiths is about to visit Australia. Under the arrangement with the New South Wales government the firm is to receive 5 per cent. above the cost of construction of the works in payment for its services.
The railway works in the North Coast district of the state will first be taken in hand. The Mackay River Bridge is not included in the contract, but is said to be practically certain to be placed in the firm's hands.—St. John Globe, August 4, 1915.

We have now heard from the gallant Major for some time previously. As he is now reported to be still in training, which he is said to have been a year ago, we presume that in the next war in which Great Britain is engaged his training will be completed, and he may possibly join the troops in action. We congratulate the people "Down Under" on the Major's contemplated first visit to Australia. They will probably know him better than did the people of Canada when he first came to this country, where he has secured a great quantity of advertisement, which he no doubt loves.—Ed.

TOO MANY CORN GROWERS TAKE A RISK WITH CHEAP SEED CORN Bad germination in seed corn combined with prolonged cold weather at the time of planting, has been the cause of much disappointment this season to ensilage growers. The seed corn growers of southwestern Ontario were almost equally disappointed through being unable to find a market for their thoroughly dried corn of strong vitality. Many samples were taken by seed inspectors, and the investigations made, indicate clearly that at least 75 per cent. of the cause for a poor stand can be traced to the ensilage growers buying low priced seed.
Unfortunately high priced seed is not always a guarantee of high quality, but low priced seed is possible only with corn that has had no special care in curing for seed. The farmer who gets $1.50 per bush of 70 lbs. on the ear for corn taken out of his corn crib in the spring, has more profit than the farmer who receives $2.50 per bush of 70 lbs. on the ear for corn that has been kiln-dried or rack-dried in special corn-drying buildings.
If harvested in dry weather and kept in narrow cribs through the winter, the cheap corn may give a fairly satisfactory stand of plants with thick seedling and good soil and weather conditions. But too many farmers have learned to try their sorry very serious risk they take in using corn wintered in this way. It is always advisable for growers to procure seed corn on the ear, as during moist weather shelled corn in transit to the storage will absorb moisture and mold within a very few days, thus destroying its vitality.

UTILIZATION OF FISH WASTE.
One of the problems that have long confronted the operators of fish canneries is how best to dispose of cannery waste.
This waste is usually very heavy. In the case of humpback salmon, it has been stated that "the waste is from 40 per cent to 50 per cent of the round weight." The waste from the "red" salmon is rather less, but it constitutes a serious loss.
According to an estimate of the United States Department of Agriculture, the waste at the Pacific Coast canneries is amounted to 140,210 tons in 1913, which, at values fixed by commercial operations, would amount to over two million dollars.
The products obtained from the reduction of the waste are fish scrap for fertilizer and fish oil. An average of several analyses of the raw waste from the humpback salmon showed that it contained 3.02% nitrogen, 3.46% bone phosphate and 10.43% of oil. At retail prices this would give a value of $20 a ton. It would seem desirable, therefore, to establish fish meal plants in the neighborhood of the larger canneries to utilize the waste.
One difficulty, however, has been that the canning industry is carried on for only a short time each year, and, as the fish reduction plants are expensive, considerable capital would be kept idle during most of the year. On the Atlantic coast of the United States this handicap has been overcome largely by gathering in enormous quantities of menhaden, a species of herring, and converting these into fertilizer and oil. Nearly 50 factories, having a total invested capital of over $3, 500,000, are engaged in this latter industry. In 1912, they produced 6,651,000 gallons of oil, valued at $1,551,990, and 88,520 tons of scrap valued at $2,138,165.
Again, the help resources of the Pacific coast, which are being investigated by Prof. Prince, are without doubt of great value, and may possibly be exploited to advantage by those operating the fish scrap industry. In any event, the utilization of fish waste will not be an entire success until the cost of the process of reduction is lowered, or means are found for keeping the plants in operation for longer periods each year. It is a field inviting close attention from those interested in Canada's fisheries.—A.D.—Conservation Bulletin for July.
