A puny child is always an anxiety to Of them that nature did so feed their the parents. There seems generally no reason why the little one should be weak when it is so well fed. But the fact is that it does not matter how much food the child takes if the stomach cannot extract the nourishment from it. No benefit can be derived from just eating. That is the condition of many a sickly child. The stomach and organs of digestion and nu-trition are not doing their work, and the body is really starving. It is little use to give fish foods, like cod liver oil or emulsions, in such a case, because these also have to be digested; they may lighten the stomach's labor, but they don't strengthen it. Strength is what the stomach needs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves and increases the action of the blood making glands. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its states, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, rewires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internaly, acting directly upon the blood and aucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient health and strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Book Once Owned by James I. A volume once owned by James 1 of England has recently been added to the treasures of the Boston Public Library. The book, given to the libcity, was bought of Dodd, Mead & Co., of New York. It was printed in London in 1603 by Val Sims for Edward Blount. The book is unusually interesting because of the fact that i was the first translation into English of Montaigne's "Essays," and the undoubted source of Sha espeare's inspirations. There is another copy now in the British Museum, which has an autograph that has been attributed to the great dramatist. The copy in the Boston library bears the autograph and signature of the English King, who ordered the revision of the English version of the Bib'e nd was called by his contemporaries "the wisest fool in Europe. book was translated by John Floric, is a literary artist. Inoculation' is no new thing. The Chinese were the earliest to practice it. They dipped a plug of cotton or rag in the virus from a pustule and placed it in the nostril. Two ancient English physicians, Gilbertus Angelicus and John of Gaddefden, both speak of smallpox as commonly known, but the Chinese remedy was unknown to them.

The first book on smallpox was written by a priest and physician who lived at Alexandria and wrote thirty books on physic in A. D. 683. He also knew nothing of vaccination, but advised swimming, drinking ice water in large quantities, saffron and warming

The real discovery of vaccination, we are told, was made before Jenner conducted his experiments. In the year 1774 it occurred to Benjamin Jesty, a Dorsetshire farmer, having the old notion about cowpox being an antidote for smallpox, that it would serve as well to be "cut" for cowpox, so accordingly he himself did actually "cut" his wife and children for that disease. But Jesty is unknown to fame. Jenner's name is blessed-and banned-by millions.

Sly Fishermen.

In nearly all streams where the current is swift you will find the nets of the caddice worms tucked down between two rocks or fastened to a flat stone on the brink of a waterfall. These little nets catch stray water bugs and sometimes entangle small fish. They are made of a silken fabric which the worm spins with its mouth and are shaped like a funnel, the larger end being pointed up stream so that the water, rushing past, spreads them out in position. The nets are very strong and quite similar in construction to a spider's web. Close by his net the little fisherman builds his home. Lift up the nearby rocks, and under them you will find a little bunch of pebbles bound together by silk threads. In among these is a small silk tube, in which the worm lives. Were it not for the pebbles attached to it the caddice worm's home would go sailing down the stream. As an extra precaution he oftentimes fastens one end of the silk thread to a large stone.

Kindred Minds.

General Thiebault says that at one time when Napoleon was carrying out an operation which could only be accomplished with absolute secrecy he rode one day to the head of a column, where he heard a soldier say: "Faith, if I were general in chief I know what I should do." "Well," called Napoleon, "what would you do?" The soldier unfolded his plan. It was the very one which Napoleon himself had evolved. "Rascal!" cried the general. "Will you hold your tongue?" After' the battle which had proved the wisdom of the project he sought

What She Was Meant For. A lady of great beauty and attractiveness who was an ardent admirer of Ireland once crowned her praise of it at a party by saying:

Ap Irish couple whose married bliss as not without a few "squalls" reeived a homely lecture from the spirtual adviser regarding their disgraceut quarrels.

His reverence said, "That dog and at you have agree better than you." The reply somewhat upset him: "If yer rivirence 'ill tole thim tigither, ye'll on change yer moind?"

Love Is Not Blind. "Love is blind," murmured Mr. Meekton regretfully.

"That's nonsense," replied his wife. When a girl fails in love with a man, she sees magnificent qualities in him which none of her family can make out and which become wholly obscure even to her in the course of a year or so."

Hopeless. A fat French lady despairingly says, "I am so fat that I pray for a disappointment to make me thin, but no sooner does the disappointment come than the joy at the prospect of getting thin makes me fatter than ever."
