As a preface to his attack upon the recent army appointments in England, Rudyard Kipling tells a story of a man who was carrying a bag, and of whom a fellow-traveler asked what it was that the bag contained. "Mongooses," was the answer; "my brother sees snakes, and I'm taking the mongooses up to kill them." "But your brother doesn't see real snakes." "No; but these aren't real mongooses."

A story is being told in the London clubs about King Edward. A discussion once arose among a circle of his intimate friends as to how they would each meet a sudden reverse of fortune. One of them turned to the Prince-it was before his accession-and said: "If the monarchy was overthrown here, sir, what would you do?" The Prince of Wales thought for a moment, and then replied: "Well, I think I might support my family by lecturing in the United States upon how it feels to be Prince of Wales."

When Mark Twain lived in Buffalo he made the acquaintance of some neighbors under peculiar circumstances. Emerging from his house one morning, he saw something which made him run across the street, and remark to the people who were gathered on the veranda: "My name is Clemens; my wife and I have been intending to call on you and make your acquaintance. We owe you an apology for not doing it before now. I beg your pardon for intruding on you in this informal manner, and at this time of day, but your house is on fire!"

At the conclusion of his speech, Senator Chauncey Depew was among the first to take Mr. Towne by the hand and congratulate him. "Senator Towne," he is said to have remarked, "your delivery was splendid, your rhetoric unsurpassed, but your argument was damnable." This lefthanded compliment was no doubt intended to embarrass Senator Towne, but it didn't. He bowed politely to Mr. Depew, and said: "Senator Depew, am glad you compliment the only features of my speech you are capable of inderstanding."

Nebuchadnezzar's Throne Room.

(Berlin correspondence of the London "News.")

The German Oriental Society confirms, the reports in American papers to the effect that Dr. Koldewey has succeeded in discovering Nebuchadnezzar's throne room at Babylon. It is a gigantic building, about 60 feet wide by good, rich blood, then feel new vigor, 160 feet long. Exactly opposite the door is the niche in which once the strength, buoyancy. You'll see a dozroyal throne stood, and on both sides if you use Ferrozone. It sharpens the and on the northern front of the hall appetite, and you enjoy your food; you are richly colored ornaments, in good get color, and old time strength comes preservation, which will doubtless back. That's because Ferrozone aids prove of the highest historica, and ardigestion, makes red blood. Ferrozone tistic importance. The German expeis strength for the nerves and vigor dition has also begun excavations in for the brain. Be sure of the name, the City of Babylon, near the present village of Jumjuma, and has already discovered a goodly number of inscribed clay tablets, which, according to the testimony of Dr. Weissbach, the Assyriologist of the expedition, conusually ranges from 20 to 35 per cent tain letters, psalms and vocabularies. They are, therefore, all documents of the deepest interest, and are specially calculated to further the study of the Old Testam nt.

With the nelp of new railway material, the vork on the hill of Amraniibu All is snortly to be resumed, and the excavations of this unique Panthe of the Babylonian metropolis, hid den deep down in the earth, promise rich and varied discoveries. The German Oriental Society does not confine its activity to Babylon. It has secured two other hills, named Fara and Abu Hatah, which are believed to contain particularly fine monuments dating from 4000 L.C. The two hills are not far from Nuffar, where the American excavations are being made, and the Sultan has already issued an irade viline is stronger, more penetrating, permitting the excavations.

The Playgoer's Dinners.

A correspondent who signs himself "Serious Playgoer" writes to the "Illustrated London News": "Is it not possible to induce the public to moderate its eating and drinking before going to the play? If you have eaten a very large meal, how can you be in the mood for real drama? Nowadays the playwright has to provide, not na, but an aid to digestion, a kind of dramatic equivalent to the cigarette and liqueur. He may count himself happy if rows of gentlemen in white waistcoats are gently stimulated by a theatrical anecdote, set to music if possible, and enlivened by charming costumes. If his characters have any troubles, these must be comic embarassments, not the sordid cares that crease even a white waistcoat in actual life. I see the necessity for this entertainment so long as the playgoer has no scruple about his dining. Max Beerbohm, who treats this subject with admirable philosophy, propos that the theater shall open in the early morning. Let us take our drama, he says, after breakfast, when the mind has a dewy freshness. Let commerce and its toils be put off until the even-ing. This, I fear, is a poetic ideal, like asking the moon to shine in the morning and the sun to oblige about nme p.m. It is upon the playgoer's dinner that reformers must concenste their energies."

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

Is Invaluable for Growing Children

Malt Breakfast Food is the best food for children of any age after infancy. If you would have your little ones thrive by putting on firm flesh and making bone and muscle, their diet should, to a large extent, be Malt Breakfast Food. This king of foods is delicious, appetizing, satisfying and quickly digested; it quiets the irritated stomach and gives restful and healthful sleep. At the present time we know of many mothers who are bringing up weakly and frail children on Malt Breakfast Food by advice of physicians, and the results in every case are happy and promising. Malt Breakfast Food pleases the whole family. It produces a vitality and energy that Oatneal and ordinary can never bestow. Order package from your grocer.

The Jellyfish. The bay of Naples abounds in medusæ or jellyfish, often growing as large as two feet in diameter and weighing fifty and sixty pounds. Some of them shine at night with a greenish light and are known as "noctiluca" (night lanterns) by the natives. The jellyfish sometimes make migrations in great groups, sometimes so large and so thick as to impede the navigation of vessels, like the floating plants in the Sargasso sea of the tropics. These shoals of medusæ, as they are called, may be so dense that a piece of timber plunged in among them will be held upright as if stuck in the mud, and ordinary rowboats cannot force their way through them. Their migrations have never been explained. They are rregular and occur at no particular season of the year and under no particular influences.

The World's Greatest Chorn Russia boasts of the world's greatest choir. It is in the cathedral of Alexander Nevski in St. Petersburg and is attached to a convent erected in honor of the patron saint of Russia. Its members are all monks chosen from the best voices in all the Russian monasteries. When a fine singer appears among the novitiates, he is sent to the monastery of Alexander Nevski, where he is trained as carefully as an opera singer and remains there, doing nothing except assisting at the music at mass in the morning and vespers in the afternoon until he becomes aged, when he retires on a pension. Some of the voices are of marvelous strength and sweetness, and it is said that some embers of the choir can shatter a thin glass into fragments by singing into it, so powerful are the vibrations of their tones. The monks are all vegetarians. They never eat meat. The rules of the church forbid them to shave, and their hair is worn like a woman's

Private Marriages of Royal

TRITING of the alleged morgan-

atic marriage of the late Em-press Frederick, the Paris correspondent of London "Truth" says: "A Berlin paper stated some days ago that the Empress Frederick was at the time of her death the wife of Count Seckendorf, her house marshal. The other journals call on the Government to disprove 'the monstrous asser-Why should it be a monstrous assertion? The Count was an old and faithful friend of the Empress. He accompanied her in her artistic tours. Frederick esteemed him highly. It is now some years since her youngest daughter married. Why should she not marry a gentleman so distinguished as the Count? The truth is that the private marriages of royal and imperial widows are not the exception, but the rule, and have been so for centuries. Some august widows were satisfied to look much lower for their second husbands than the Empress Frederick is said to have done. In France and Italy marriage with a person of inferior rank was thought a sign of greater weakness than a 'friendship.' The worship of a first husband or wife does not necessarily exclude affection for a second. I had a relative who presented colored glass windows that cost £1,000 apiece to churches in memory of his first wife when he was walking about London with his second wife. There was never a widow more devoted to the memory of her first husband than the late Duchesse d'Orleans. Nevertheless, she was believed to have married her secretary. 'A conscience marriage' is easy in Catholic countries save in France. Nobody except the priest who officiate need know about it. 'A conscience marriage might be celebrated very quietly in England by publication of banns with a slight change of names, changing, say, Guelph to Wolf, or Bonaparte to Goodshare. There is also the registrar's office, where things might pass with utter privacy. Scotland is the country of all others where private marriages can best be entered nto. No solemnization is required and the status that arises from a mere exchange of vows is stable."

A Contrast.

CONTRASTING the England of today with the England of forty years ago, E. L. Godkin says in the New York "Evening Post:" poor man in England who had ever left his home then was somewhat of a prodigy; now nearly half of his substance goes in excursion fares. A dissenting minister used to be an object of abhorrence and contempt; now he is quoted in Parliament by politicians. A lord used to be an object of dread and reverence; now he is hardly better than a foreign count. In the England that I remember, third-class passengers on the then newly-built railroads stood in like cattle: now they sit on cushioned seats, the third-class cars being so like the first-class that the gentry have largely taken to using them. The loveliest parts of the country at this summer season are thronged with excursionists, and it is fair to say that there are no longer secluded spots in England. The famous seat of the lake poets, Cumberland and Westmorland, is so overrun with tourists that the road through the mountains seems to be leading to a fair; the small steamers on the lakes are thronged to their utmost capacity. Unhappy is the place which has some touch of 'Americanism' in its history. The railroads dump on it thousands of our countrymen, who poke their noses everywhere, cut chips off every wooden memorial, and apply the hammer to every stone one, and almost compel the inhabitants to move out. The 'American' in England used too often to be regarded as a low-class foreigner; to-day he is a welcome guest who has a right to have his curiosity gratified, and whose weaknesses and desires are referred to in almost every paper read before a learned society, so that now hardly anybody achieves fame so readily as an 'American' traveler. The old cabined, cribbed, confined English hotel, consisting of a private house converted into an inn, and kept by an ex-butler or housekeeper, has almost disappeared. New hotels, 'on the American plan,' are springing up everywhere, and the English railroads are copying them at their stations, to their great advantage. In fact, it would be difficult to imagine a greater transformation than the England of my youth has undergone.

Temptation.

In our carelessness we may often tempt other people without knowing it. Sir Edward Malet writes in "Shifting Scenes" that he had gone to a hotel, at Milan, and eager to see the sights, sallied forth, leaving his portmanteau yawning, his dressing-case ajar, and money on the table. I thought of nothing save that I was once more in Italy. Still, I locked my door, and took the key with me. When came back, an aged and shriveled housemaid followed me into my room She was wringing her hands.

"Ah, mio signore," cried she, going up to the dressing-table and opening a In the drawer lay ten or a dozen gold "Yes," I said, "they are mine."

"Ah, signore, how could you do it? How could you leave this money about? It was all lying on the table." "Why, I locked my door. I knew it

"No," she cried, "it was not safe! It was cruel to put such temptation in my way!" She sank upon a chair and burst into tears. "Think of me, signore. I am very poor. I have six children to keep and a husband who can do no work. The money would make me rich, and you leave it on the table, the gold pieces all loose to dazzle my dyes and to put the devil into my heart! Through your thoughtlessness I might go to jail, my children might starve, my husband die. Ah, signore mio, never do it again! Think of the poor. Be mereiful to we have poor. Be merciful to us. Do not put temptation in our way."

It does not seem to have occurred to Sir Edward Maiet that possibly the old housemaid was trying to work him for a gift of the gold pieces.

THE TORTURE OF NEW SHOES

A North West Lady Tells how "Foot Elm" Gave her Relief and Comfort.

It is diffucult to get a pair of new shoes that fit the feet perfectly at the outset. Most times they pinch and squeeze the foot, and cause great discomfort until they are "broken "Foot Elm" shaken in new shoes makes them fit as comfortably as an old pair, prevents the "drawing" of new leather, and prolongs the life of the shoe.

Here is the experience of Mrs. Francis M. Norrish, Nanton, Alta.,

"I have for years suffered with ender feet and it has been perfect torture to wear a pair of new shoes, no matter how soft or easy. I am glad to say "Foot Elm" has given me relief and is a very valuable remedy for tired feet."

PAMPHLETS FOR TOURISTS Grand Trunk lesues New Summer

Resort Publiciations. Two new publications have just been issued by the publicity department of the Grand Trunk Railway System. One of them is descriptive of the charming summer resorts on the east coast of Lake Huron, including Southampton, Port Elgin, Kincardine, Goderich and Sarnia Ontario and the beaches that are reached through Port Huron, Mich. The publication is emanced by direct reproductions in half-tone from photograph's and is printed in the Luxotype process. In addition to a description of that part of the country there is information for the lover of rod and gun, lists of hotels, with accommodation and rates, and a great deal of other data that is of interest to those who are looking for a summer play ground. The other new publication is a description written in a story-like form most interesting, and dealing with that vast wilderness embracing the region around French River, descriptive matter takes the tourist over the northern division of the Grand Trunk to North Bay and from there across Lake Nipissing to Chaudiere Falls on the French River, which is as far as navigation by steamer can be enjoyed. The rest of the journey, is made by canoes, several portages being necessary; but the scenery is so grand and so magnificent that anyone is well repaid for a visit to this

The hunting and fishing in this comparatively virgin district is unexceled-black bass, maskinonge and pickel being the most numerous of the finny tribe found here, the big fellows of the maskinonge species running from 20 to 30 pounds are a frequent catch. The charms of this wonderful country beyond Lake Nipissing are not all confined to the summer season-it is beautiful in August and September, and it s gorgeous in October and November. During the first two weeks of November the deer-hunting is good, and in duck-hunting season a full bag is obtainable at any time. The Waters of the streams tributary to the French river are literally alive with gamey fish of all varieties and sizes.
