POLL TAX IS COMING

Officers will soon Commence Their Rounds for Collection

Young Men of the City May Form an Anti-Poll Tax Club

Will the young men of this city submit to the obnoxious poll-tax this year once more. This coming week the police will commence their annual rounds to collect this tax, which is to the authorities themselves a distasteful duty, and now if ever is the time to take united action.

Phillip Bowyer, M. P. P., and Herbert S. Clements, M. P., our parliamentary representatives from Kent, have both openly declared themselves as being opposed to this hounding of young men for a paltry dollar, which Mayor Stone admitted in Council last winter was almost entirely eaten up in fees before it reached the city coffers. His Worship put himself on record at that time as believing that the poll-tax should be wiped off the books, and all of the Council agreed with him.

It has been suggested that the young men of the city get together and hold a meeting to discuss what is best to be done in order to have the tax removed. If the matter were fought out in the Courts, the uselessness of the tax might be proven. Certainly the young men are foolish to submit to this tax if they are not legally bound to do so, and many of them would be willing to contribute more than the dollar to defeat the measure.

It is, therefore, up to the young men themselves, and it should be no difficult matter to form an Anti-Poll Tax Association, and subscribe funds to aid in proving that the tax is neither beneficial nor necessary, but a nuisance.

SPLENDID SERVICES

Harvest Thanksgiving at Holy Trinity was Largely Attended

Two Fine Addresses Given—Choir Rendered Excellent Music

The harvest thanksgiving services at Holy Trinity church yesterday were, under the circumstances, all that could be desired. The terrible downpour of rain on Saturday prevented many from assisting at the church decorations, and left the roads in such a state that the country people were unable to attend on Sunday. However, there were two good congregations, that in the evening comfortably filling the large church.

The sacred edifice was nicely decorated with grain, fruit and flowers, and looked exceedingly well.

The rector was the preacher in the morning, and took as his text, "Honor the Lord with thy substance, etc." He excelled himself in his treatment of his subject, and many were the favorable comments upon it heard during the day.

In the evening the preacher was the Rev. G. Dymond, M. A., of Glenora, who also preached an instructive sermon on the "Rich Fool."

It was the choir, however, who came in for the greatest praise. It has just lately been reorganized after the holidays and has as yet had little opportunity for practice, but it rendered the services yesterday to the delight of all. It contained over twenty members and, as the rector stated in the morning, all were drawn from Holy Trinity congregation, and there was not a paid singer among them. Miss Flossie Edmondson sang a beautiful solo, "I heard the voice of Jesus say," during the offertory in the morning, and Mr. Will Hatley took the solo parts in the anthems, and sang as an offertory solo "The Last Chord" in the evening. He was in excellent voice and was warmly congratulated on his work yesterday. Mr. Dolman presided at the organ with his usual efficiency. The offertory was about $100, which was all that was expected, considering that only two weeks ago the congregation contributed about $140 to the jubilee fund.

Lord Charles Beresford will be accompanied by no less than nine admirals, and the big ships of his fleet will include 25 battleships, 14 armored cruisers and 10 protected cruisers, with a fleet of smaller vessels, including torpedo-boat destroyers numbering over 60.

The naval attaches have not been given any information, and will not be present, except the Japanese, who as Great Britain's allies have in recent years been the guests of the officers in command on occasions of the kind.

The meeting of the fleets and so many officers is also to be taken advantage of to test the suitability of Cromarty, on Moray Firth, as a place of anchorage for big ships and its eventual adoption as an auxiliary naval base to that being developed at Rosyth, on the Firth of Forth.

To say little and perform much is the characteristic of great minds.

Ernest and Clarence Higley left for Toronto this morning, where the former will take up the study of pharmacy, and the latter will enter Trinity College.

GETS YEAR IN CENTRAL

Frank Rawson, alias F. E. Brown of New York, is Sentenced

Insulting Language Case is Aired in Police Court To Day.

Frank Rawson, of Newark, New Jersey, alias F. E. Brown, of New York city, charged with pilfering Mrs. Snell's boarding house, came up for sentence this morning. He was arraigned on two charges of theft, and was sentenced to one year in Central Prison on each, the sentences to run concurrently.

No evidence was taken, as the prisoner pleaded guilty to both charges.

The troubles of Mrs. Fogler and Mrs. Mary Lapp, two residents in the Ebenezer Block, were aired in Judge Houston's Court this morning.

Mrs. Fogler claims that Mrs. Lapp called her daughter a low name, while the latter says that the daughter called her a vile name first, and this was the cause of the row.

During the taking of evidence, Mrs. Fogler admitted calling her daughter a pup and a brat. Judge Houston severely reprimanded her on this, and remarked that she could hardly expect other people to have proper respect for her daughter if she called her hard names herself.

Judgment was reserved till next Monday.

FOUL PLAY?

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Michael Turpenoff, a Macedonian shopkeeper living at 21 Eastern avenue, was shot and killed in a room above his shop yesterday morning.

The explanation of the shooting, as given by his brother, Leo, and two boys, who were in the room at the time, does not satisfy the police, and has only possibility to favor the truth.

The brother says that Turpenoff had an argument in his room with the brother and two boys employed in the grocery. Turpenoff threw open his coat, and the revolver, dropping from his right breast pocket, fell to the floor. As Turpenoff stooped to recover it, it exploded.

The bullet entered the right arm on the outside slightly above the wrist joint, passing upward diagonally through the forearm. It came out on the inner side of the arm, just below the elbow, then penetrated the coat, vest and two shirts, entered the right breast slightly above the nipple and came out almost directly opposite at the back but did not penetrate shirt, coat or vest at the back.

The pistol is hammerless, and the only explanation which bears out the brother's story is that the thumb or fingers of the hand stretched out to regain the pistol up-ended it so that the barrel pointed against his wrist and a further pressure of the hand pressed the trigger.

Another theory is that the dynamite said to be in these cartridges exploded with the concussion when the gun fell, and that the dead man, having reached over to catch the gun as it dropped, received the wound.

Dr. Glendinning, in addition to his telephone call, was summoned by a Scotchman who is engaged in missionary work in the vicinity. This man and another son of J. K. Lee, the druggist, told him that a Macedonian had fainted in the street. It was not until the doctor had examined the man, who died as he entered the room, that he discovered he had been shot.

Turpenoff was lying across the bed with his head to the wall. Dr. Glendinning moved him lengthwise in the bed and bound the hole in the right breast. The man was not bleeding from the wound and the doctor made a diagnosis of the condition of the body, giving him only an injection of strychnine.

The room was filled with Macedonians. Only one of these could speak English. Of this man the doctor enquired: "Were they quarrelling?" And he, coming close to the doctor, whispered "Yes" in reply to all other questions put to him he consulted with those in the room before answering.

The pistol with which the man is supposed to have been shot was mysteriously hidden when Dr. Glendinning arrived. He asked where the pistol was. After asking the brother of the dead man the reply came "in the bed."

Found Under Mattress. The Macedonian looked between the mattress and springs from the outside. Finding nothing, he turned up the mattress from the bottom, uncovering an old revolver, 32 calibre. The doctor examined it. The spring of the trigger was broken, and the gun had evidently not been used for some time. The men then turned the mattress from the far side of the bed, which was placed close against the wall and found another revolver resting on the springs about the centre of the bed. Dr. Glendinning took possession of the pistol, which was fouled at the muzzle, apparently from recent discharge. Dr. Glendinning says that the pistol could not have been placed where it was found by the man before he died, nor indeed would the man have been capable of any intelligent movement after he was shot.

There is no logic so powerful as necessity.

The older we grow, the less we are needed.
