The usual story is that of hunters taking unfair means to slaughter deer, taking unfair means to slaughter deer, but the following story which comes up from New Brunswick and related by an occasional correspondent of The Fredericton Herald has a different twist. The correspondent relates that John Brooks, a prosperous farmer, accompanied by a ten-year old boy, made a trip to Brooks' Lak t. Arriving at the lake they happened to turn up the shore a few rods in search of blueberries, when they suddenly came upon a large cow moose mired at the bottom of a large hole. Here the poor brute a large cow moose mired at the bottom of a large hole. Here the poor brute, all mud and in an exhausted condition, value struggled to extract herself. John has the reputation of being kind to dumb brutes, so, finding that he and the boy could do nothing in getting those "mighty long hind legs" out of the mire, he sent the boy to the nearest house, Mr. Akerley's, for help. Mr. Burns W. Akerley returned with an axe. They cut long levers, and to their axe. They cut long levers, and to their curious task they went with a will. By an hour's time they freed the captive, and without even waiting long enough to thank her friends, she bounded light-ly away.

Deerhounds Speedy and True. Deerhounds Speedy and True.

The deerhound is speedy, and when the time comes to tackle game worthy of his jaws, he is all there. Only in Canada, the United States and Australia are deerhounds at the present time used for running down other animals. In the United States his chief quarry is the coyote, while away down in the South Pacific he is used to pull down or stick up kangaroo and take by the throat the bloodthirsty dings or wild dog that plays such havoc among the dog that plays such havoc among the flocks. The deerhound has the common sense that teaches him to take the marsupial by the hindquarters. If he sprang at an old-man kangaroo's throat while the six or seven feet was up against a tree, the 'roo would disembowel the dog with his hornlike hind feet.

"TELL IT TO THE MARINES."

Penys' Version of the Origin of the Expression by Charles II.

The saying, "Tell it to the marines," is traced to Pepys, the author of the famous "Diary," and it is said by him to have originated with Charles II. of England. "It so befell," as the story goes, "that his light hearted majesty, with an exceedingly bored expression on his swafthy face, was strolling in the shade with the ingenious Mr. Pepys, secretary to the admiralty. "I bad speech yester'en at Deptford,' said Mr. Pepys, 'with the captain of the Defryance, who hath lately returned from the Indies and who told me the two most wonderful things that ever, I think, I did hear in my life.' Among the stories told were of fish flying in the air. 'Fish flying in the air!' claimed his majesty. 'Ha, ha! A quaint conceit, which 'twere too good to spoil wi' keeping. What ho, sir—he turned and beckoned the colonel, Sir William Killigrew of the newly raised mari-time regiment of foot, who was following in close conversation with the Duke of York—'we would discourse with you on a matter touching your own element. What say you, col to a man who swears he hath seen fishes to fly in the air?

"'I should say, sire," returned the sea soldier simply, 'that the man hath sailed in southern seas, for when your majesty's business carried me thither of late I did frequently observe more flying flish in one hour than the hairs of my head in number.'

"Old Rowley glanced narrowly at the colonel's frank, westher beaten face. Then, with a laugh, he turned to the
