WEEK OF PRAYER

Second Service at George St. Church; Hearty Singing and Silent Prayer. (I. C. M.)

There was a depth of solemnity at last night's service which seemed to penetrate the entire congregation, and which left an abiding feeling of deeper things at the close. This depth of feeling did not come from anything of an external character, nor did it come from anything particular that was said, but it came as an impression, as at intervals the congregation bowed in silent prayer. From the very first of the service this was experienced and all present felt the better for it.

The Pastor of the Church, the Rev. R. E. Farquhar, conducted the service and it was the devoted spirit which he manifested that brought the service to such a desirable place. Besides this there was a very choice selection of hymns, and they were sung to tunes which the people knew, and which they all could sing—and did sing. Some congregations seem to have lost the desire for wholesome singing which was so prominent in public worship; but the congregation at George Street Church last night, caught up the song and everybody had a part.

The special topic for the evening was "Our Own Church and its Neighborhood" and the speaker was the Rev. W. B. Bugden of Wesley Church. The address treated upon the Church in a local sense, and showed the place of the Church in its own parish. The membership of the Church may not be perfect, nor its service be all that could be hoped for, but the best ideals of life and character were found therein. The Church in all ages stood for the best. But it was quite possible for the influence of a Church to be lost, and this is sometimes caused by lack of unity among the members, and by local jealousies between different sects. Sectarianism and Christianity were very different, but sometimes the former was taken for the latter, and smallness of soul followed as a result.

The Church may get in a wrong place, and miss her high calling; at such times it may be that like one of the Churches spoken of in the Apocalypse, its candle may be put out. There was room for and need of more unity among our city Churches. We lose much because of our isolation, and much better work could be done if there were closer fellowship. The Church not only had a local influence, but it also had a worldwide influence. What influence therefore was the united Church exerting upon the Washington Conference now about closing? The world's destiny almost seemed to depend upon that Conference. Was the Church at one with its prayer for that great assemblage? Was there sufficient of the spirit of Pentecost being manifested in our Churches? The Apostles waited ten days for the baptism of fire, and then they were instrumental in establishing the Church through Europe and Asia.

The service was indeed a good one and was closed by prayer and benediction by the Rev. Dr. Curtis. Tonight the service will be held at the Kirk, and a large congregation is expected to attend, and for this the ushers will be in readiness to accommodate all who come.

KINSMAN'S CREW HAD TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE

Capt. Picco and crew of the ill-fated schooner Kinsman, which was lost on the other side some time ago, arrived by the express yesterday afternoon.

The Kinsman left Battle Hr. on November 19th loaded with 8,000 quintals of Labrador codfish, shipped by her owners, A. E. Hickman Co., Ltd. The vessel was bound to Gibraltar for orders, and a good run was made. On December 1st the S. S. Guild Rosa, from Jamaica, bound to Havre, was sighted and Captain Picco signalled asking for his correct position. The schooner was hoisted in the meantime, and a boat being lowered mate Blake went on board to interview the ship's officers regarding their position. While waiting for the mate and his boat's crew to return, both ships got in close proximity, and owing to bad management on the part of those on board the steamer, the Guild Rosa fell across the Kinsman's bows tearing away the headgear and smashing off the bowsprit as well as doing other minor damage. After clearing away the wreckage, the captain of the steamer advised Captain Picco to abandon his vessel, but this was refused, feeling that while there was any possibility of reaching the land it was his duty to stand by the vessel. The Guild Rosa seeing that the Newfoundland crew were determined to stand by their ship, continued on her voyage, promising to report their condition by wireless, which was done. The Kinsman was then 350 miles S. W. of the Azores, and everything looked hopeful till the evening of the 2nd, when a S.S.W. gale sprang up, which caused the already badly strained vessel to leak even worse than before, and on sounding it was found that there was 4 1/2 feet of water in the holds. Despite the pumps being kept continually going the water gained and the ship began to sink slowly by the head. The men, however, although worn out by their arduous work never lost heart, and at noon on the 3rd, Santa Maria was sighted 35 miles distant. The Kinsman was then in a hopeless condition, and it was seen that she could not last much longer.

After working at the pumps all night and in the meantime the vessel some what nearer land, the Portuguese steamer Ghalmeis was sighted and Capt. Picco decided to abandon the vessel. The crew were taken on board the steamer and brought to Madeira, from there going to Lisbon where they took a boat for home. The crew are: Capt. M. Picco, mate Noah Blake, boatswain Alf Payne, cook J. Yarn, seaman Joseph Picco, Jack Mullings and Philip Cheeseman.

Leamy, Sub Deacon: His Grace the Archbishop presided at the throne assisted by Rev. J. Rawlins, P.P. Killbride; and Rev. J. Pippy, P.P. St. Joseph's.

After His Grace proceeded to the catafalque and intoned the "Non Intres," Libera and De Profundis being sung by the Priests, His Grace afterwards incensing and sang the last prayers.

The singing throughout the ceremony was solemn and devotional. It was touching and impressive as the long procession—headed by cross bearers, acolytes, Rev. Mother General, Mothers, Sisters, Novices and Postulants carrying lighted tapers, while the Priests chanted Miserere and De Profundis—wended its way under the softly falling rain to the Convent Cemetery where all that was mortal of Rev. Mother Aloysius was laid to rest.

The funeral was largely attended, among those present were the Rev. Mother and Sisters of the Presentation Convent, St. Patrick's and Mother General and Sisters of Mercy.

EXPECT BIG SEASON

The first debate of the 1922 session of the Methodist College Literary Institute will be held to-morrow night at quarter of eight, when the subject for discussion will be: Resolved, that the public interests are better served by the competitive system than they would be by the co-operative system. This is an extremely topical subject and a lively debate should result. The M.C.L.I. stands now upon its fifty-fifth year of active debating, and its 55th gives promise of exceeding all of recent years in interest displayed and in attendance.

The Institute has in its fifty-five years given the country many speakers, and that its good work of bringing out and training speakers will continue, it is to be hoped.
