Sir John Lubbock is an entomologist and Lombard street banker. He is comely in presence and a charming lecturer. He is a useful member in the House of Commons, and the British public are indebted to him for the Bank Holiday act. He has been known to watch the little games of a bee for nine hours at a stretch.

From the Amherst Sentinel.

We have been favored in advance with a copy of an address and reply which will, this evening, be read at an oyster supper to be given at Hamilton Terrace Hotel. Such occurrences speak volumes for those immediately interested, and when it is borne in mind that the watch, chain, etc., are valued at $300, the popular Trackmaster in question is surely to be congratulated on his prizes of 1878.

AMHERST, April 4, 1878.

Thomas Bastin:
Gentlemen,—I have much pleasure in accepting from you, in behalf of the employees of the Track Department, on Central Division, this very munificent but gratuitious token of their esteem, accompanied as it is, with such kindly feelings and good wishes for the welfare of Mrs. Trites and myself.

It is, indeed, gratifying to know that whilst I have ever striven to have the duties of my division faithfully performed, I have at the same time retained the good will of you all. This is clearly evinced by your valuable presentation this evening, which is, if correctly informed, the united and free will offering of every track employee in this Division. track employee in this Division.
Allow me then to say, that it is largely to their efficiency, that Central Division has in the past been so tral Division has in the past been so well kept, and relying on your care and attention, I way safely predict that in future it will always equal any other on the Intercolonial Railway; and I feel assured that our separate and individual duties will be, hereafter, so performed that the mutual good feeling which has hitherto existed between us, will always continue.

self, allow me to return you our sincere thanks, and believe me that
