To the Editor of the Hevere Signal.

Last Friday evening in Knox Church, Captain Gibson read an extense from a newspaper about Noah and his converts. While he was reading the following thoughts larone in my mind regarding the subject. It requires no family to conceive how the withings of his day would laugh at the crasy old man as they would deem him. We can imagine how the passers by would those at him, as, with hammer in hand he put togetiser the timbers of his strange ship. His faith in God was etcadfast, nothing could divert him from his gurpose. The rain he know wendle tome, because God had said it would. He have that his ship would preserve his family because, according to divine direction, he was constructing it. And he warmed the thoughtless and carcless of his genomation,—we know he did. St. Peter expressly tells us that he was "a preacher of righteousness." His voice fell on disobatent ears, but he could say as St. Paul said to the Jews, "Your blood be upon your own head. I am clean." Thus, with nothing but a measage from God, for 120 years Noah lived by faith, and it was faith which never wawverd for a single moment—it endured to the end, and he had his reward. The delage came; the world periahed; Swah and his family were saved. Is it wrong to speak of this ancient servant of God as a hero? If to believe when God speaks, if to be gentle when rowilers meer; it to be calm when foos race; if to be willing to be laid by, bidden only to trace God—it all this to be heroic, men never aw a truer here than Nosh. And when can describe the relief of that instant, when the gentle dove returned with the olive leaf in her mouth. Who can describe the sepectation of those seven to their gratitude in building, as the first act of their new life, an altar unto the Lord.
