The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Ruth Cameron

Can you talk small talk?

If you can, be thankful.

If you can't suppose you learn to.

I don't believe you will regret the effort.

It is splendid to be able to talk well on deep and important subjects, but that ability does not by any means do away with the need of being able to talk lightly and easily on unimportant subjects. And the man or woman who considers that it does and despises small talk, I think makes a great mistake.

Small talk is the small coin of social intercourse, and as such no one can afford to be without it.

It is splendid to have a wallet stuffed full of twenty and fifty dollar bills and big checks, but it is decidedly inconvenient to have no smaller change.

Yes, of course, one would prefer to have the bills and do without the small change to having things the other way around, but why not have both?

Some years ago a young newspaper man of decided genius, a brilliant conversationalist when talking on some of his favourite subjects, came to call on me.

I introduced him to my mother, and what do you suppose his first remark after the "Pleased to meet you" was? "Would you like to know my idea of the universe?"

And forthwith he expounded it to her.

Imagine it.

His idea of the universe was rather original and worth hearing, to be sure, but wasn't his offering it as an opening remark about as absurd as passing your newboy a hundred dollar check to pay for your morning paper?

Now I certainly wouldn't want that man to lose one bit of his originality and depth of thought, or the least iota of his ability to talk fascinatingly on deep subjects, but I do think it would smooth his future path for him if he could learn to talk small talk on occasions.

To be able to talk witty and sparkling small talk is a fine art—a genius before which I bow in deep admiration.

I listen to people who can do that with the same enjoyment with which I watch a game of tennis between skilful players.

That, however, is a gift. We cannot all possess it.

But by conscientiously forcing ourselves to practice it whenever occasion arises, I think we can all learn to talk decently creditable small talk.

And don't you think that's worth while?

Ruth Cameron

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Fiero's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medicinal forest plants. Fads and Fashions.

Dancing frocks are of soft, filmy lingerie or flower sprigged mousselines and batistes. They are short-skirted and short-sleeved.

Many of the new silk dresses are being made with skirts short enough to show the ankles, and all have some kind of overdress.

The Russian effect has even extended to bathing suits, which are now made with tunics or with skirts in triple flounce effect.

Cut steel again has a prominent place as an ornament, figuring in pendants, slides, buttons, buckles and bag and eye-glass mounts.

Some of the new bathing caps are of silk, gayly flowered, plaided and dotted. The assortment of colors leaves nothing to be desired.

Oriental-looking fabrics still have first place in neckwear, and it is not likely that the "Persian" craze will wane before late in the autumn.

Bags of broche, suspended by long twisted cords of silk, are modish. In some instances these cords are so long that the bag hangs below the knee.

Triangular-shaped pieces of Persian silk are among the smartest coverings for the rubber bathing caps. The color effect is decidedly pleasing.

Gray spade pumps and oxfords with matching holsters in silk or lisle are dainty in appearance and ever so much cooler than black hosiery and patent leather.

Draperies of imitation pearls are freely worn as gown trimming, appearing in heavy ropes across the front of the bodice, around the arm as sleeves and even around the waists of girdles.

Silk gloves to match the dress are attractive, even in red and green. These look quite glaring upon the counter, but much better when on the hands.

Three and four-strand marabout scarves have practically gone out in favor of shawl-shaped affairs with long end tassels of chenille or silk matching the marabout.

All of the neckfrills or frilled collars worn with summer frocks have cuffs to match, and by means of these collar-and-cuff sets the simplest of little dresses may be amazingly dressed up.

Evening wraps for the coming winter are likely to be very elaborate, intricate structures of scarves piling upon a foundation overlaid or filled in with lace, and caught here and there by large ornaments.

Stiff plain and plaited chemisettes of linen with or without collars, to wear with V-necked tailored blouses are promised an early vogue—really a revival. With them will be worn all sorts of mannish cravats.

The Watteau or shepherdess hat, with flat, round crown and mushroom brim bent in poke fashion at the sides and flaring out and up at the back, will be trimmed with flowers and aigrettes or with wings.

The latest material for woman's dress—called sackcloth and burlap spitting—is a handsome and rather expensive imitation of coarse packing-burlap, made of silk and wool. It is very adaptable and effective.

Narrow bands of fur, like those which have trimmed so many summer chiffrons, will be seen on the winter models—on street frocks of velvet and serge and on dressy gowns of satin, chiffon, moire and chiffon velvet.

Materials for early fall frocks include plain and flecked chevots, two-

A Beautiful Spot.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words about Hamilton Inlet on the Labrador. A person who has never looked up the Geography of Grosvenor Bay, might think it strange to come down here in a vessel and sail forty miles up a fresh water river, and then anchor in five fathoms of water, and see large and lofty trees bending on all sides.

We arrived here on Aug. 13th, 1910, in the schr. Alexander, Capt. Pelley, with a load of merchandise for John Groves & Bros., natives of this place, who do a fur trade in the winter with the Montagnais Indians. Just a few yards from where we are anchored is a very low island very thickly covered with spruce trees of grand size. On this little fertile spot live three families very comfortably situated, save for the freshet from the river in the spring which puts them to a little inconvenience for a while, then all is peaceful again.

Around and up this little river, which causes these settlers little trouble, is a scene sublime. Up we rowed in a boat one evening till we came to the riotous rushing of a torrent unchecked that leaped sheer down from rocks five hundred feet high, thundering forth the praises of its own beauty, as it tossed in the air triumphant crowns of silver spray. Fain would we have stayed there to watch its magnificence; but the evening was closing in and we had to glide down the placid waters of the river again. Just as we got in the narrow part of the river, which is almost arched in with trees, the moon rose over the nearby mountains (which lies about twenty miles S. E. of this river). Then this poem came in my mind, and turning around to the other man in the boat, I recited it as follows:—

How bright emerging o'er yon brown-
cloud heights
The Silver Empress of the night

Upon limpid pool reflects a stream of

And faintly in its breast the woodland bears.

We glided down to our schooner and told the crew of what we had seen, and how nature has accomplished her work up this placid river.

Thanking you in anticipation for space

I remain, yours truly,
M. L. BUTLER.

No Whales in Straits.

Editor Evening Telegram:

Dear Sir,—In your paper of Aug. 6th an item appeared stating that whales were very plentiful in Straits. I may say that this is not correct as there has not been a single whale seen in the Straits this summer. I would like to know how the Prospero got that report. The few whales we have seen are about 8 and 10 miles southeast of Belle Isle.

Hoping, Mr. Editor, that you will correct this statement and oblige,
Yours truly,
CAPT. C. HANSEN.
