The Duty of Kicking.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

People who are always kicking are a nuisance. Nobody likes them. But did it ever occur to you that people who never kick are also a nuisance in their way? They are shirkers. They aren't doing their share in keeping things running smoothly. A man I know ordered some goods from a plumbing company. He picked out exactly what he wanted and paid. When the goods came they were not what he had picked out. He protested. They put him off with that commodity which is even cheaper than fresh air—promises never meant to be kept. Another letter brought no answer at all. His Contribution To Better Conditions.

And then he put the matter in a lawyer's hands. Said a friend: "What good will it do you? The goods aren't worth more than twenty-five dollars. The lawyer will cost at least that. Why don't you let the thing go?"

Said the man: "That's not fair. These people expect me to do that. That is evidently the way they do business. They need a lesson. I'm going to give it to them and perhaps they won't treat the next man the same way. I regard that as a contribution to civilization."

Most Women Hate Law Suits.

Now I hate going to law as much as the next woman (I think women as a rule have a great fear and dread of the law as something incalculable and uncanny), but I liked what that man said and agreed with him.

GIVE YOUR NERVES A VACATION.

"I feel a thousand times better," remarked a woman in response to her friend's assertion that she looked years younger. "No," I have not been away but for one week I have been on a "anti-telephone vacation, and I have refused to admit callers, and haven't opened a letter or read a newspaper."

If more of us, leading the strenuous everyday life of the city would retire to the seclusion of our quiet room and refuse the world admittance we would be able to keep up under the strain, without a physical and mental collapse.

Each day we arose with the worry of our mail, the news of the world in the papers, the continual call to the telephone and the tiresome business of entertaining unexpected visitors. We feel at times that we would give anything in the world to get from it all. This is absolutely possible, if one only wishes to do it, without even leaving our own comfortable home.

Our desire to run away, "we care not where," is simply the craving of the nerves to be allowed to relax and rest up.

Stop up your phone, ignore your letters and telegrams, ignore the furious ringing of the door bell, and when you come back to the world rested and serene, you will be surprised to find that it has gone on just as well without your worry and strain.

THE JINGO

The jingo is an ardent citizen who would rather see somebody else fight than eat.

Prior to the outbreak of the Civil war this country was full of able-bodied jingoes who wanted everybody to get into the thick of the fray with a flag in one hand and a meat axe in the other. Every town and hamlet had its star jingo who mounted a cracker box and hurled defiance at the foe between copious chews of tobacco. As soon as the call for volunteers came, however, thousands of these orators disappeared from sight and had to be dragged out of a hair trunk in the attic, with terror written all over their knee joints. This impresses the lesson that you never can tell by the size of a man's mouth how far his spinal column will carry him in the hour of need.

The jingo has always tried to plunge this country into a war which other people would have to fight. This is because the average jingo has never been in battle himself and doesn't know what it feels like. If all the jingoes who have been doing business on the American continent for the past twenty years could be gathered together and thrust into the first line trenches in northern France, those who returned home in one piece would have more respect for war and would not be so anxious to introduce their friends and neighbors to a life-sized specimen.

The jingo is sometimes a politician who started out by busking the common people and is unable to learn any of the new steps. It isn't always the man with the largest flag and the loudest voice who got into the recruiting office first. America has millions of patriots who are not saying anything about it. The real fighting over in Europe is being done by the quiet men, the farmers and clerks and day laborers, the obscure men who want nothing so much as peace and the privilege of returning home to their families. If the jingo exists in Europe to-day, he will be found far from the front, within easy reach of a bomb-proof basement, and don't you forget it.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. Patriotic Football.

A wild and exciting exhibition was served out to a large gathering of spectators last evening by the C. E. I. and B. I. S. Though the game was good value for a draw, the decision went in favor of the latter team.

The teams were: C. E. I.—Goal, Lush; backs, Churchill, Wilson; halves, Hallett, Drover, Reid; forwards, Stick, Harris, Ewing, Jerrett, Miller.

B. I. S.—Goal, Phelan; backs, Dugan, Kavanagh; halves, Brown, Brien; forwards, Devine, St. John, Phelan, P. Brien, Kavanagh.

The B. I. S. scored first through Devine, followed by Jerrett and Ewing notching up two goals for the C. E. I. Kavanagh sent in the equalizer and Phelan landed the third and winning goal. The latter player and Lush were injured during the game. Mr. J. St. John was referee.

Kriegsgefangenenlager, Langensalza, June 12, 1917.

My Dear Aunt,—A few more lines to let you know how things are going. I have not told you yet anything of how we were captured. It was like this:—We were about 3,000 feet over the lines under some clouds, when we were attacked by some 8 or 9 machines, my engine started giving trouble and we got separated from our own lot. Once we were separated we were in for it, and some five machines set on us. Several bullets came through the radiator, one of which knocked my observer unconscious. Of course that put the hat on it. Then another hit the engine and fixed it. Well there was nothing left to do but to endeavour to get down our side of the line without further damage. But, in every rose there is a thorn, and our old bus settled down 10 yards behind the German front line. We were both thrown out and stunned slightly. We were both very lucky indeed to come off so lightly. They treated us very decently in the trenches, patching us up and sending us to a field hospital. From there we went to a clearing station and then here. Of course there are some funny instances I have to tell you when next we meet in dear old London. It hasn't spoilt my love for flying at all and the next opportunity for a flip I'll take it. I don't know for a flip I'll take it. I don't know for a flip I'll take it. I don't know for a flip I'll take it.
