HOCKEY.

STRATFORD DEFEATED.

The Stratford aggregation of puckchasers were neatly turned down by the local team at the Princess Rink last night in a fiercely contested game, which at times was decidedly rough. This victory means one step towards the O. H. A. championship, which the local boys are confident of landing this year, and London is now in the semi-finals, and will have to play off with the winners of the game between the Guelph-Nationals and the Waterloos. Both these teams were defeated by the locals last year.

The rink was crowded by between 1,200 and 1,500 enthusiasts, who gave the home team an ovation when they lined up on the ice shortly after 8 o'clock. There has been no change in the team since last year, and every-body was delighted to see the favorites again in the game. Ewing was not in the pink of condition, but he put up a great game. Hobbs, as "puck off," got away with the rubber in good style, and did some clever rush work. Brown, cover point, did some excel-lent lifting and shooting on goal. He and Peel made a number of brilliant individual rushes. Ewing, Gilmore, Hobbs and Westcott, on the forward line, are a quartet that would be hard to beat. They are pulling better to-gether this year than last, but at times their combination play was any-thing but good. Johns, in goal, played his old reliable game, and made some stops of what looked like sure goals.

The Stratford team put up a splendid combination play, but their shooting on goal was weak. Woods, in goal, for the visitors, made a stone-wall defense. He stopped some hard shots. Farquaharson, on the forward line, played a great game, and Gordon, cover point, did some clever shooting.

The first goal was scored by London after five minutes' play. Westcott got the puck, passed to Ewing, and the latter passed to Hobbs, who put it through. Play then centered for some time, and the rubber was kept flying up and down the ice with-out getting dangerously near either

After 17 minutes' play, Peel, cover point, saw an opening, and started down the ice with the rubber. After passing three times successfully he made a pretty shot and scored London's second goal. A. Again the men of London district have gone. Exactly nine weeks intervened between the day that the first contingent left and the day of departure for the second one. Nine weeks ago the first force of manly young Canadians went to do battle for the Queen and her empire. At that time the all-pervading and enthusiastically-expressed opinion was that if England needed more of our young men, and still more after that, they would be ready and willing to go. Yesterday the fancy became a reality. When the first contingent went away the affairs in Africa were rosy-hued in comparison to the darker outlook of today. The men of the second contingent have all knowledge of the trouble before them, yet they go; and perhaps this fact helped to swell the crowd who cheered and swayed and cheered again when the men marched to the station yesterday. The expressions of admiration and the cheers were as tumultuous as before. It was not a public holiday, but the crowds were large all along the line of march. The progress of the contingent was impeded by the many friends, some admiring and animated, others saddened by the separation from dear ones, who were eager to grasp the hands of the soldiers and wish them Godspeed and a safe return.

When the first contingent went from London the day was warm, almost with the heat of midsummer. The atmosphere was balmy and limpid, while in the crowd on the station the heat was intense and stifling. The men marched along in light summer attire, with their greatcoats encircling their with their greatcoats encircling their shoulders. Yesterday was a typical Canadian winter day. The snow was lying deep and white along the roads. The melody of jingling bells was carried along by keen winds, and at the touch of the sun's long rays, myriad sparkles gleamed on the earth's pure winter covering. As the mean merched winter covering. As the men marched they were silhouetted clear and black against the white background, clad in the heavy shoes and long dar's coat and fur cap of the Canadian nailitia-

ARRIVAL OF ST. THOMAS MEN. The arival of the train from St. Thomas at 2:30 o'clock with the 25th Battalion Band and about 200 citizens from that city, was the commencement of the sendoff. After lining up quickof the sendoff. After fining up quickly on the station, they marched to the barracks, headed by Col. Stacey, Major McLachlan and Chaplain Hill. They were received with all courtesy by the officers and men at the school. The officers and men at the school. The kindly spirit of comradeship that actuated the St. Thomas representation in coming to London to make the farewell heartier, was the subject of much appreciative comment throughout the pure and simple.

JEFFRIES AND SHARKEY.

Sharkey has received a challenge from James J. Jeffries to fight 20 rounds

thirty strong, went on parade. Major King, of Kingsville, was in command. He looked very handsome in his smart hussar uniform, his appearance exciting many remarks of approbation. When all was in readiness Col. Holmes went before the men who were to leave, and made a short, soldier-like address. He was proud of them now, and he was sure that what they would do at their first opportunity would cause him to be still prouder of them. They were to remember that they held the honor of No. 1 district. They must not let any other company do better than they, and in conclusion he said "Good-bye; God be with you." The terse, manly words struck home, and each man applauded the colonel enthusiastically, and would have cheered if they had been permitted. The order was then given to march. The Mounted Rifles passed through the arcade of the barracks at 3:55 o'clock.

The procession was headed by Lieut.-Col. Holmes, D.O.C., and Capt. Betty; then came the band of the St. Thomas Battalion and the representation from that city, under Col. Stacey; the attached men, with Capt. Carstairs leading; the artillery, in command of Sergt. Barnhill, and the Mounted Rifles, with Major King commanding. The men marched in double file down Adelaide street to Central avenue, and west to the drill shed, where there was an immense concourse of people awaiting them. Upon their arrival the volunteers were greeted with loud cheers. The police had great trouble to prevent the crowd from breaking the formation. In the shed the 7th Fusiliers were already assembled. Large numbers of people were inside, and as it became so large as to hinder the movements, a guard had to be placed at the door with drawn bayonets. The men were given the order "About face," and they formed up at two paces distant from No. 1 company, R. C. R. I. Col. Holmes then commanded absolute silence.

RELIGIOUS SERVICE. The solemnity of the occasion was marked by an impressive religious service. Ven. Archdeacon Davis, chapiain of the Seventh Fusiliers, read the general confession; Rev. J. G. Stuart, chaplain of the First Hussars, read the 46th Psalm, and Rev. Canon Hill, of St. Thomas, chaplain of the 25th Battalion, led in the recitation of the Apostles' Creed.

Rev. Canon Dann, senior chaplain of the district, delivered an eloquent and cheering address, and offered up a prayer for the volunteers in his address Rev. Canon Dann said there was a feeling running through the empire that made it one. Interest was centered in South Africa. The sons, husbands and friends of many Can-adians had gone to that country, displaying the courage and patriotism characteristic of the British empire and her sons wherever they might be. And for these young men about to enter on the most eventful period of their lives, the same feeling was experienced. The whole empire was anxious. The reverses met with at the front had produced that feeling. But Britain knew that the same heart beats in the colonies as at home, and that they would yet triumph in the cause of justice. "This war is a righteous war," he said, "and you can enter upon it with a feeling of duty. When you know a war is righteous, you know it is a necessity. And if a necessity, it is your duty to fight." He held that God had allowed the reverses which had been met with, to teach the British empire some great lesson. "Perhaps we were too proud, too self-conceited," he said. "Enter upon your work with the humility of a true soldier and the heart of a May God bless and guide you. Don't forget God's religion. I would ask you to dedicate yourselves to him.
Try to fight as true soldiers of Jesus Christ. Be faithful to yourselves, to your country, and, above all, to God. We honor you for serving your country in the hour of need, and let me say that those who are left behind have one great duty to perform, that of prayer. You have all heard Rud-[Continued on page 7.]
