GLIMPSE OF ONE OF THE COTTAGES at Alexandra Sanatorium, Byron, where Woman's Sanatorium Aid Society desire to build an open-air pavilion, or preventorium, for the tubercular children of London.

Preventorium Sadly Needed For London's Tubercular Children

Woman's Sanatorium Aid to Raise Funds for One by Means of Pageant in Grand Opera House
April 23 and 24—A Resume of the Fight Against the Disease in London.

The announcement that citizens of London are soon to have a preventorium, or open-air pavilion, for the treatment and education of tubercular children, will, no doubt, be received with much enthusiasm, the Woman's Sanatorium Aid Society having undertaken to raise the necessary money for the building and equipment of this much-needed addition to the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium at Byron.

Should Care for Thirty. A careful study of the problem of tuberculosis in London, and vicinity reveals the fact that from 20 to 30 at the present time could and should be taken care of. Six children are being cared for at the sanatorium, and a number in their own homes. To bring more forcibly to the minds of our citizens the need of a separate building for children it is only necessary to give a brief history of the great and lasting good our institution is accomplishing.

The Beginning. Previous to the year 1910 in London the unfortunate tubercular person of limited means had no place near at hand where he or she could go for treatment, and the case of one unfortunate thus afflicted actually dying on the verandah of one of London's foremost charity workers, impressed the fact that something must be done to provide a shelter for those unfortunate. At this time the London Health Association was formed, a fertile farm of 115 acres purchased near Byron, and on it the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium, erected with accommodation for 40 patients.

A Waiting List Now. Since the opening of the sanatorium 150 patients have been admitted. During the past year, with the ever-increasing demand for beds, there is always a waiting list. To overcome this necessity the London Health Association are formulating plans for an additional building. In the special ward for the advanced cases of tuberculosis at Victoria Hospital, provision is made for ten patients, and in the near future a wing now being completed will be opened, giving a total of from 20 to 25 beds, these patients being under the charge and direct supervision of the physician at the Byron Sanatorium.

Work of Free Clinic. But the struggle against tuberculosis does not end here. Shortly after the opening of the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium a free clinic was established at the out-patient department of Victoria Hospital. A permanent nurse was appointed and free clinics are held twice weekly, on Tuesdays and Fridays of each week.

Women Give Timely Aid. It is in connection with this free clinic that the Woman's Sanatorium Aid Society justly claim much credit for assistance given. To aid in this outdoor work they have established a fund to procure free of charge to the tubercular poor, fuel, milk and eggs, clothing, bedding, sputum refills, and anything necessary to aid the recovery or check the advance of this dread disease. Such cases are reported to the president of the society by the visiting nurse, and in no case is assistance ever refused. In many cases the heads of families are afflicted, and the mother and children kept from want until the father is restored to health and once more able to resume his occupation and care for his dependent little ones.

A Striking Instance. Not long since a woman past middle-age, and widowed less than a year, came to the clinic for a bottle of medicine "to make her feel better." She was prescribed for, and on examination found to be in an exhausted condition. She was advised to rest at home in a well-ventilated room. The visiting nurse on going to the home, discovered that she had been working from twelve to fourteen hours a day in her efforts to make a home for four young children, but could keep up no longer. When this fact was reported to the Sanatorium Aid Society, they immediately came to her assistance. After three weeks' treatment, proper care and nourishment, she has gained several pounds, and the society are providing suitable employment to enable her to live and keep her little ones in the home.

With the ever-increasing number of cases applying for aid at the clinic examination reveals the fact that often several members of a family are afflicted with this disease, and this is particularly true of children. In one case the father of a family of six children was removed to the Sanatorium, and examination revealed the fact that all six children had the disease in some form or stage.

Need of a Preventorium. To meet this emergency a preventorium must be built at once at Byron. The Woman's Sanatorium Aid Society have volunteered to erect this building and raise the necessary funds. On the evenings of the 23rd and 24th of April the great historical pageant, "The Temple of Fame," in which some of London's best musical and dramatic talent is to participate, will be held in the Grand Opera House.

"The Temple of Fame." Tickets for "The Temple of Fame" are now on sale. Plan for reserved seats opens at the box office of the Grand on Monday, April 21, and following days. On an occasion of this kind, not one seat should be vacant, from the pit to the "gods," as an evidence of the hearty goodwill and co-operation of all citizens. Donations also will be gratefully received and acknowledged by the treasurer, Mrs. Fred White, 473 William Street.

The society wishes to thank all who have contributed to this production a success, including those who are taking part, Mr. A. J. Small for the use of the Opera House, Mr. Charles Wheeler, Mr. A. D. Jordan and Miss Green, and especially the trained nurses, etc., will be given recognition, while the suffragists will have a room to themselves. What Holland is doing for the women of her colonies will be revealed in the colonial department.

Lady Aberdeen to Attend.

The exhibition will take place in Amsterdam and men and women of distinction in many fields are expected to give lectures and addresses in the women's section. Lady Aberdeen, president of the International Council of Women, is scheduled for a visit in May.

PROBLEMS OF THE FAIR SEX SOLVED BY CYNTHIA GREY

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn as they are received. No letters can be answered privately.]

Is Not Demonstrative.

Dear Miss Grey: I am 19 and very much in love with a young man four years my senior. He has not told me in words that he loves me, but he has broken his engagement with his former sweetheart and asked for my steady company. He has been and is a perfect gentleman at all times. I have every reason to believe that his intentions are good. And do you think when the time comes he will show me the loving side of his nature, as I never could marry a man who was not demonstrative? He earns a good salary and is well able to support a wife.

VENUS. A.—The young man must be interested in you or he would not ask for your love. The fact that he has broken his engagement should be something in his favor, instead of a matter of regret.

Talk About the Weather.

Dear Miss Grey: I guess you will think I am green, and you will think just right. There is a nice girl with whom I would like to keep company with. I would like to know how to open a conversation with her after church or at a singing, and what should I say when I go to leave her at her home? Please give me all the information you can about going with a young lady, and I assure you it will be greatly appreciated. I am a fellow of the way it is abused. I think, after all, the weather topic is the best one with which to open a conversation. It is the safest for a bashful fellow, and it is about the things the girl is interested in. If you attend the same church and sing in the same choir you must have lots of common interests you could talk over. Don't plan any set line of conversation with the girl. Just talk about the things that naturally arise. This girl, no doubt, will help you along if she is as bashful. When you leave her, tell her you hope to have the pleasure of her company soon again.

More Marmalade.

Dear Miss Grey: I see by today's paper Mrs. J. C. H. wishes recipe for grapefruit marmalade, so am inclosing one which is very reliable. Take 3 grapefruit, 2 oranges, 2 lemons; cut in small pieces, and soak over night in 6 quarts cold water. In the morning bring mixture to quick boil for ten minutes, then let cool. Boil slowly until quite thick, and add sugar cup by cup, and boil until it jellies. This recipe makes about 5 quarts, and is delicious. Could I trouble you to publish the story of the Blue Willow Chair. Must add that I find your page very interesting and helpful. Awaiting your pleasure, I remain, MRS. G. F. B. A.—Many thanks for sending your recipe. I shall try and publish the article you request some day next week, as I am sure it should make interesting reading.

Here's Legal Advice.

Dear Miss Grey: I am a fellow gave a girl an engagement ring and afterwards the engagement was broken, and he asked for the ring back, is the girl compelled to give back the ring? 2. If she refuses can she come upon him for breach of promise? He was under age when he gave the ring. Thanking you for your kind advice, A READER.

100 Years' Progress Marked by Exhibit

Holland Women to Hold Big Exhibition in Amsterdam.

A century ago Holland regained its old independence and right of self-government, and the Dutch people propose to celebrate this event by a series of exhibitions illustrative of the progress that has been made during the intervening years.

The Dutch women decided that they required a special exhibition in order to show how their sex has advanced during the century, so they have planned for a display from May to October.

One part of the exhibition will show a middle class house of 100 years ago, and particularly the kitchen, where all the cooking for the house was done and provisions were kept.

Many Achievements. The domestic will not be the only side of the life of the Dutch women of 1913 illustrated. Their opportunities and achievements in art, literature, music and sports will be noted, together with the industries outside the home. In those days many women were overworked as seamstresses and diamond workers and endured a treadmill existence.

The 1813 part of the exhibition will be held in an old house, surrounded by old trees and a garden in the style of the period. In striking contrast to this

KATHERINE LESLIE'S HOME CHAT

Manners and the Child.

There are mothers who appear to believe that manners have no part in the education of a child. Or they think that bye-and-bye, when the child is a young man or woman, it will be time enough for him or her to learn these gracious ways of give and take, of being and doing, of thinking and speaking, that go so far to make the world we live in a livable and attractive place. Never was greater maternal delusion. The child who is not taught to be mannerly, to behave in a civilized, if not a charming fashion, in its own small world of home, will never behave in that way when it is older; or, if it does, its manners will be painfully acquired through many needless humiliations. As manners make the man so do they the child; and, as an unmannerly man is an object of dislike to all the world, so no one loves an unmannerly child. Manners should be as much a part of a child's education as morals—in fact manners are so closely related to morals that they seem to be the very flowering of morals. And when they are not that they often seem a very agreeable substitute for morals! It is an evidence of the rarity of really good manners in children, that when a child—girl or boy—has good manners, they are remarked upon with quite as much astonishment as commendation. I doubt if there is anything in child, woman or man that will stand her or him in such good stead throughout life as just good manners. They are an open Sesame to every heart, and indeed often find more admiration than many higher qualities unaccompanied by a courteous attitude towards others. The boy who is rude, lacking in deference to his elders, and boorish in behavior; the girl who remains seated when her elders enter the room, who precedes her mother and grandmother or other older women into a room, a street car or building, who is not dainty in her personal habits, nor delicate in her behavior at table, who does not know how to listen courteously and sympathetically, who cuts short the talk of others, no matter how tedious, so that she may air her views, who laughs and talks loudly—how shall these ever know how much love they miss in life all because they were not taught, as children, the beauty of good manners?

of color, but it requires a feeling for artistic values to adapt them successfully to the hats of a brilliant hue.

CLEANING CANE FURNITURE.

Before housecleaning look over all your furniture. Probably you will find a piece or two that must go to the cabinetmakers, or, better still, you can find some "handy man" who will bring his glue pot, his hammer, nails, screws and his clamps and come to your house and do your work.

For your cane-seated chairs beat out the dust and turn the chair bottom-side up, washing with soap and very hot water until it looks clean. Then rinse with clear water in which the juice of lemon has been squeezed. Put them outdoors to dry quickly. This method will make an old, sagging, cane seat taut and like new.

Homes That Charm

It is not necessarily the large and wealthy house that is the prettiest; the cottage may far exceed it in beauty and present the most perfect picture of home, whereas the mansion may be cold looking and formal.

The woman who insists on her rooms always looking pretty will spend a little money each week on flowers or pot ferns. Small laurels in pots look well and last well; they also make economical window plants.

Of course, a window box should find a place on the ground floor sill. If not above, and be filled with evergreens in winter and flowers in summer. Blue tiles or green tiles look well in flower boxes.

Picture frames are often allowed to hang on the walls in a disgraceful condition, especially white-painted frames, and those can so easily be freshened up with a coat of enamel paint, which should not be stunted when required.

Then again, the art of upholstering furniture is sometimes as much soiled as the picture frames, and its unit condition is a great offense to the eye. It may not be convenient to reupholster, but at any rate chintz or cretonne loose covers could be provided.

Let all draperies used in the house be clean, otherwise there will be a lack of freshness about the house. Send chair and sofa covers and curtains to the wash before their soiled condition is over-aggressive and bear the same rule in mind with regard to muslin cushion covers.

The pretty home is the one that is clean and tasteful.

Substitution is attended by so many dangers, that, to be safe, you must insist upon getting what you ask for, and what you know is good. This applies as strongly in the case of tea as of anything else. Ask for "SALADA" and accept no other tea.

BROCADED CREPES FOR EVENING.

Many of the new evening gowns are of white brocaded crepe de chine, velvet or satin, and trimmed with fur and lace.

The Poet's Corner

TO DAFFODILS.

Pair Daffodils, we weep to see you haste away so soon,
As yet the early-rising sun has not attained his noon.
Stay, stay, until the hasting day has run but to the even-song;
And, having pray'd together, we will go with you along.

We have short time to stay, as you, we have as short a Spring;
As quick a growth to meet decay, as you, or anything.
We die, as your hours do, and dry away, like to the Summer's rain;
Or as the pearls of morning's dew, ne'er to be found again.
