A telegram in the Globe of yesterday dated Kingston contains an extraordinary piece of news. It says: "Major Ridout, lately of the royal military college, is a descendant of Pocahontas and Capt. Smith. He has the signet ring of the latter, and a number of other interesting relics." It will be news to students of history to learn are men in the secular or rank infidel society that Capt. John Smith, the founder of that were once under the power of God, Virginia, and Pocahontas left any issue.
That they were never married is certain; that they cohabited needs proof. Smith, falling into the hands Powatton, the principal Indian chief of Virginia, was condemned to death, when Pocahontas, a girl of ten years of age, took his head in her arms and saved him. Powattan pretended to adopt the captive; but his bad faith was shown by a conspiracy to murder him, some time ofter, when he was again saved by Poca-Virginia, and Pocahontas left any issue. after, when he was again saved by Pocahontas, by whom the secret was conveyed to the intended victim. Pocahontas was then only eleven years of age; and humanity rather than love may be supposed to have prompted the unfilial but humane act. Pocahontas was afterwards married to Rolfe, and as his wife she was presented at the English court Smith was still alive; and Pocahoatas has never been accused of bigamy. Powhatton's call ng him son did not mean son in-law. We believe the story about the geneology of Major Ridout to be a myth. The possession by Major Ridout of a signet ring, which may have belonged to Smith, would not prove his alleged descent. Smith himself never hints at any such connection with Pocahontas as is here supposed, and his biographer is silent on the subject. That she was only old when the prisoner met Smith is a fact distinctly stated by himself; and if our memory is not at fault, she was married to Rolf at seventeen. That she was a mother before that date is improbable.

In places where the fire protection is poor the rates will be high; in towns well protected the lowest figures will obtain, but in them all there will be an advance, as the companies claim that they have been losing money both through low rates and through cutting of rates. Hereafter it is intended to avoid cutting of rates; the penalties therefor being such that it will be worth an agent's position to underbid the

I fear he is a nihilist in our midst, one of the proposers to shoot the big legal thieves, Vanderbilt, Gould, and other members of society, that from the cradle to the grave live on the fat of the land without doing anything for it. He would shoot them down like the old woman in the south was for stealing pumpkins. This Cromwellian measure would soon disperse them with our cousin's tune wringing in their ears. A friend not long sgo bought a horse that was half starved and had been cruelly beaten; on nearing him he would down with his ears, open his mouth and rush at one; three months afterwards, by changing his conditions, treating him kindly, he would neigh on one's approach. Treat one another justly. Instead of the prevailing cannibalism there would be a good deal of neighing.

There has been proposed an industrial home for the waifs and strays of Toronto. A POLISH CELEBRATION. universary of the Rescue of Vienna

John Sobleski. From the Philadelphia Press. On the 12th of this month the Polish nion of the United States proposes to celebrate the 200th auniversary of the rescue of Vienna from the Turks by John Sobieski III, king of Poland. The commemorative exercises will take place in the evening at Lewars hall in this city. In 1683 the Turks who had for some time been threatening Europe and terrifying the different principalities, broke into Hungary and threatened the subjugation of Aus. and king of Hungary, besought the assistance of Sobieski, king of Poland. Sobieski had all his life been an hereditary enemy of the Turks, and readily complied with his request and became his ally. The Grand Vizier, Kara Mustaphs, marched unimpeded to Vienna. There the imperial troops took refuge, a mere handful of men, only 48,000, while the Turks numbered about 600,000, according to tradition. Siege, with the rade appliances of two centuries ago, was laid against Vienns, and continued for two months. When that city was taken, the way would be easy for the conquest of Europe. On September 11 Sobieski, with 16, joining battle with the Turks, by aid of the Australians, utterly defeated them. In this manner Europe was saved from the iron yoke of the Moslem hordes. The battle was one of the great turning points in history, and Sobieski, the "Wizard King," is its hero. ance of Sobieski, king of Poland. Sobieski
