

credible, yet anyone may verify the calculation for himself.

Whether Bishop Foster's arguments will in all cases carry conviction or not, his fervid eloquence and devout spirit will at least warm the heart and kindle a glow of devotion and heavenly home-longing in the soul. Some of the reviewers have taken serious exception to some of his positions; but it will be found easier, we conceive, to object to them than to confute them.

Life in a Look. By MAURICE S. BALDWIN. Montreal: Dawson Brothers pp. 113; price 50 cents.

This is a plain and practical treatise on the New Birth, by the the well-known evangelical rector of the Parish Church, Montreal. No theme can be more important; and the author exhibits intense moral earnestness in his treatment of it. Our Lord's conversation with Nicodemus is the theme of these cogent arguments and fervent exhortations. No one, we think, can read the book without strong convictions of duty and deeper yearnings for a higher life.

The Ark of God: the Transient Symbol of an Eternal Truth. By JOSEPH PARKER, D.D. pp. 350; price, $2.25. Methodist Book Rooms.

One of the preachers best worth hearing in London is Dr. Parker, author of "The Paraclete" and other works of striking originality and power. He preaches in the City Temple, one of the handsomest Dissenting "chapels" in the metropolis. The present volume is a collection of discourses preached from its pulpit. They possess a freshness and vigour of style that are strikingly characteristic of the man, and possess a sort of unity from the cognate character of the subjects discussed. To ministerial readers the volume will possess a further interest from the series of talks on homiletic topics which it contains. Any suggestion that so successful a preacher as Dr. Parker may have to offer on the great life-work to which he has devoted his remarkable powers cannot fail to be of advantage to all who seek to emulate his usefulness.

Short Studies on Great Subjects. Third Series. JAS. A. FROUDE. 12mo., pp. 400. Scribner & Co. and Methodist Book Rooms. Price, $1.50.

Even those who most strongly dissent from the philosophical teachings of Mr. Froude will cheerfully admit his merit as one of the most perspicuous and vigorous of living writers. In this volume of short studies there is not much room for dissent from his judgments, and the wide range of his information and his special studies in the subjects discussed will lend great weight to his opinions. Among these are the Annals of an English Abbey; a review of the recent progress and present position of Romanism, a very suggestive essay; Studies in Greek and Latin Literature, for which the learned author is especially qualified; a journal of a Tour in South Africa. The judgment of so shrewd an observer upon the character of the Kaffirs and Zulus, and on the political and social condition of the South African possessions of Great Britain, cannot fail at the present time to be of much interest.
