The Secret of Influence.

Perspective is a law of art, a law of life. Without it there cannot be an adjustment of the parts; too great prominence of any one part destroys proportion, perspective. Our relation to our family, to the outside world, to our intellectual and physical development, is balanced only as we follow the law of proportion, as we maintain perspective. "To see life steadily and to see it whole," is to keep true perspective, just relations, such as develop a character that is a tower of strength to others.

What is it we admire in others? Is it not that quality which we term being "self-contained?" How calm and strong that man or woman seems who sees life steadily; who does not turn an incident into an event, an event into an epoch; who never distorts the small affairs that come into the personal or family life into occasions of importance! Such a one sees life as a whole; sees how little that comes into life is important when placed in its true relation. If we would keep a true balance, we must see each person act, incident, in due proportion to the whole of life. People who see life steadily, who see life as a whole, never grow indifferent. They see that life is cumulative; that to-day is yesterday's future and to-morrow's prophecy. Such people are never blinded by prejudice, by self-interest, by feeling. They are the springs in a desert, the mountains from which we gain a vision of what lies beyond our narrow valley.—The Outlook.

"Early to bed and early to rise
Makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise.
These happy conditions pertain likewise
To those who persistently advertise.

—Printers Ink.

The man who advertises only once a year has no abiding place in the public memory. It is his rival who reaches the public every day, and whose statements are to be relied upon, who achieves the greater measure of success.—Denver Times-Union.

—John Kendrick Bangs' quaint humor is to enliven the pages of the Ladies' Home Journal with a series of twelve articles depicting the club talk of four men about women's affairs. Mr. Bangs calls this club "The Paradise Club,"—"paradise," he says, "because no woman nor serpent ever entered into it."

A LIBERAL OFFER.

The enterprise of the publishers of the Youth Companion, Boston, Mass., has steadily advanced the paper year by year, keeping it always in the front rank of the best periodicals. It fills to-day as no other publication the popular demand for a practical family paper, one that is equally valued and enjoyed by old and young, and free from all objectionable features.

The best writers of all lands are engaged to write for its columns. Among the famous contributors for the volume for 1895 are two daughters of Queen Victoria; Mr. Gladstone, the most eminent living statesman, who has for the third time written an article expressly for the Companion; Sir Edwin Arnold, W. Clark Russell, Charles Dickens, Frank R. Stockton, J. T. Trowbridge, Mark Twain, C. Warman, the famous locomotive engineer, and more than a hundred other writers who are known throughout the world over.

The Companion appeals to all, whether in the home, in professional or business life, to the educator and laborer in every department of work. Its sound, practical editorials deal frankly, fairly and concisely with the questions of the day. Every utterance may be accepted without reserve. Full prospectus and specimen copies sent free on application.

New Subscribers will receive the Companion free to 1895 if they subscribe at once, sending $1.75, the year's subscription price. It comes every week finely illustrated.
