

Our Summer Issue.

Fred. H. Brigden, O.S.A., has prepared a handsome cover for the August "Canadian Magazine." The chasteness of the design and the beauty of the colouring combine to make it worthy of being classed as "high art."

Virna Sheard, the clever author of "Trevelyan's Little Daughters," contributes a story entitled "A Lily of London Bridge." This will be profusely illustrated from original drawings by Mr. Brigden.

W. A. Fraser, the Canadian Kipling, contributes a humorous East India story with the title "The Capture of Sheitan." This will be a feature. Mr. Fraser stands to-day at the head of the short-story writers of Canada.

George Stewart, D.C.L., F.R.S.C., a personal friend of the great historian of French Canada, will give some interesting reminiscences of his friend. This contribution is entitled "Francis Parkman and His Works," and is written in Mr. Stewart's brightest vein.

Jean Blewett. A poem.

Frederick George Scott. A poem.

Charles Lewis Shaw will contribute the first of three breezy articles on "The People of Parliament Hill." He will discuss the way in which things are done at Ottawa, his point of view being that of the practical "bone and sinew" citizen.

John McCrae, M.D., writes of "Hospital Life in a Canadian City." This article will be profusely illustrated from pen and ink sketches made in a Canadian Hospital, by Mr. W. Goode, especially for this purpose.

Frank Yeigh will give a character sketch of Sir William Dawson, the sixth article in our series of "Canadian Celebrities."

Other Features will include some short stories; a further instalment of that wonderful study, "The Widow of Mums"; two more chapters of "The Daughter of Witches"; the third article on Dante's Divine Comedy, by Professor William Clark, President of the Royal Society of Canada; another article by Mr. Nash on Canadian Garden Birds; Current Events Abroad; Editorial Comment; and Books and Authors.

No such number has ever been issued in Canada.
It will be specially suitable for sending abroad.

THE CANADIAN MAGAZINE,

Price, 25 Cents.

TORONTO, ONT.