THERE IS TIME YET

Says London Times, to Turn Canada From Reciprocity Craze.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The Toronto correspondent of The Times states that opinion is rising in unexpected volume against the reciprocity agreement, that business interests in all parts of Canada are organizing to resist its ratification and that uneasiness is believed to exist in the cabinet which may delay the adoption of the agreement.

The Times, in an editorial on this despatch, points out that while the United States gains much by the agreement, Canada, in addition to disturbance of trade by the alteration of trade routes, stands to risk her imperial connection, and urges that there may yet be time to turn the scale of Canadian opinion in favor of an arrangement that will strengthen instead of weaken the imperial connection.
