

"Older than the Dominion of Canada"

3% or 5 1/2%

If you have a few thousand or a few hundred dollars that might earn more interest, why not arrange for a Huron & Erie Deben-ture, which will interest you at 5 1/2 % per annum.

for a term of three, four or five years? Half-yearly interest coupons are attached to each Deben-ture.

Assets Over $17,500,000.

Huron & Erie
MORTGAGE CORPORATION
(Incorporated 1864)

London (Chartered) and St. Thomas

T. G. Meredith, K.C. Hume Cronyn,
President General Manager

SAP SEASON FAST
APPROACHING HERE,
WITH BIG PROSPECT

No Concerted Action, How-ever, To Tap City Trees.

The sap season is well under way in Southwestern Ontario in the vicinity of Essex. Gradually the spring is creeping north and east and it will not be long before the sap harvest will be in full swing in this district. Already some farmers have made a start.

Maple sugar and syrup production from the sap are the first step in the 1918 greater production campaign. Farmers are being urged to tap every maple tree possible. Some are already taking it up and preparing to have all the trees in the cities and towns tapped. No such action has been taken here. It is said that the majority of the trees here are too young for tapping.

There is one stimulating block in the way of a large increase of sugar and syrup. That is the scarcity of wood and the disinclination of the farmers to use the wood to boil the sap while they may get $17 a cord for it. There is a big market for syrup and sugar. The Allied countries are on sugar rations. There is a shortage of beet and cane sugar. Canada in the past has absorbed 75 per cent of the sugar maple production of the United States has eagerly grasped the balance and looked for more. Maple sugar is one of the most wholesome substitutes for sugar and the candy-makers of the United States have been asked to conserve by the use of substitutes.

There is another new and large market for maple sugar, the front Canadian soldiers have introduced it and the demand is ever increasing. Thousands of pounds have been sent overseas by the Red Cross. This has also created the foundation for a permanent export trade and a market without limit.

Local dealers in materials necessary for the gathering of sap report a brisk demand from among the farmers of London district.

WANTS CITY DOCTOR

Special Physician May Be Retained to Pass on Charity Cases.

The city council is considering the advisability of appointing a physician to pass on all indigent cases sent to the hospitals or charitable institutions. At present physicians send indigents direct to these hospitals, and the city, as a general thing, must pay the cost. It is believed the city could save a considerable amount of money by naming a physician to pass on all such cases. He is claimed that many who are sent have no right to be in such places at the city's expense. A special committee will probably investigate.

DOCTOR SAYS
VINOL IS THE
BEST TONIC

Honest Opinion Doctor Gave His Patient

Bedford, Ohio—"I was in a pitiful condition, weak, nervous and run down so I could not do my housework. I had doctored for years and tried everything under the sun. A friend told me about Vinol. I asked my doctor about it, and he replied, 'This is certainly the best medicine that can be had today. I couldn't give you any better.' I took it, and today I am as well and strong as any woman could wish to be, and it was Vinol that saved me." Mrs. Frank A. Horkey, Ash St., Bedford, Ohio.

We guarantee this famous cod liver and iron tonic for all such conditions. Taylor Drug Company, London; also at the best druggists in all Ontario towns.

Brain Fag and
Battery Fag

When the battery "plays out" your car is useless—until you get the battery re-charged and the car is efficient again. When your brain "plays out" you are incapable of a full day's work, luckily, the battery can be re-charged. Hacking's Heart and Nerve Remedy supplies the natural phosphates to the brain, which organ will again radiate life and vitality through the nerves, filling you full of pulsating life, vigor and energy. If you are listless and despondent, and feel "out of sorts" you will bring your car under the treatment of this valuable tonic. It is an investment for health that will pay you fifty-fold. Price 50c a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, postpaid, or from your dealer. C. B. Hacking, Ph.D., Listowel, Ont.

Reliance Garage

Service Station

ARMENIAN, CONSCRIPTED BY TURKS, COMES HERE TO ENLIST IN C. E. F.

Man Who Was Forced To Serve Under the Crescent Volunteers To Fight Against Oppressors.

After serving under the Turkish crescent—albeit compulsory—Joseph Bloom, a 21-year-old Armenian, was to wear the Maple Leaf of the Canadian Expeditionary Force on his collar and fight against the Turkic allies of his late taskmasters and oppressors of the Turkish army.

Bloom arrived in London today with a detachment of men signed up by the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission in New York City. He is now undergoing his medical examination before the mobilization centre medical boards and if found fit will take his place in the ranks of the 1st Depot Battalion, W. O. R.

According to the story of the Armenian recruit, he was captured in a Turkish raid at the beginning of the war, and dragged off by his captors to serve in the Turkish army. He escaped, he says, with 100 fellow countrymen at night, and managed to reach Jerusalem. From there he made his way to Haifa, France, and across to the English channel, landing in England. From England he took passage to Halifax, and later went to New York after having been given a refugee bonus of $40 by the British Government. For the past 17 months, he declares, he has been making munitions in New York and enlisted there on Wednesday with the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission.

Speaking of his experience in the Turkish army, the would-be Canadian soldier, declared that neither he or his countrymen knew at what moment they would be killed to gratify the caprice of their officers. The slaughter of so many of his countrymen in the Armenian massacres bred a blood lust in the Turks, says Bloom, which found no cause of the Armenian conscripts forced against their will into the ranks of the army of oppression.

Only One "BROMO QUININE" Name
LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE Tablets. Look for signature of E. W. GROVE, Cures a Cold in 24 Hours.

REFUSAL TO GIVE INFORMATION IS
SIGNAL FOR ARREST

Discourtesy Results, in One Case, in Court Charge.

As a result of the questioning of 105 men in London on Wednesday and today, by investigators on the staff of Lieut. J. H. Atkinson, deputy chief of Dominion police for this district, two were arrested.

Archibald McAuley, a Delaware Township youth, was taken into custody by Lieut. Atkinson at 9 o'clock this morning. He was charged with refusing to answer questions put to him. McAuley was approached on the market square. He informed Lieut. Atkinson that he was 19 years of age, but when pressed for additional information as to the exact nature of his business, he refused to "could find out for himself." Lieut. Atkinson therefore placed him under arrest.

McAuley assumed an air of utmost indifference when being questioned by Magistrate Graydon. Leaning his elbow on the ledge of the prisoner's dock, with his hands clasped in his chin, he refused to answer questions put to him. He was held in detention pending the arrival of his father, who was communicated with by the father's lawyer, and the father claimed that the boy is only 19 and will be released after a certificate will have been issued.

The other young man who was arrested Wednesday was released after being questioned by Lieut. Atkinson. He was charged with refusing to answer questions put to him. He was held in detention pending the arrival of his father, who was communicated with by the father's lawyer, and the father claimed that the boy is only 19 and will be released after a certificate will have been issued.

Lieut. Atkinson issues a warning that any further discourtesy to him, men who are charged with refusing to answer questions put to him, may be met by additional charges. A penalty is provided for such an offence under the act. It is the man's age does not make him eligible.

It is also advised that all men liable to be taken for men between 20 and 34 years of age, must have their birth certificates, marriage certificates or certified copies, if kept in their possession by married men, must have them at all times of unnecessary trouble, the deputy inspector states.

FORMER LONDON PRIEST

Father Corcoran of Seaford Dies From Paralysis.

Father P. Corcoran, well known to old-time London Catholics, died last night of paralysis. He was the oldest priest in Bishop Fallon's diocese, and was ordained in London by the late Bishop Walsh in 1872. For a time after wards he was attached to St. Peter's Parish, and later given charges of his own at La Paroisse. He was stationed at Seaford for 18 years. Bishop Fallon will sing the funeral mass at Seaford tomorrow.

OLD-TIME REMEDY

MAKES PURE BLOOD

Hood's Sarsaparilla has been and still is the people's medicine because of its reliable character and its wonderful success in purifying, enriching and revitalizing the blood and relieving the common diseases and ailments—scrofula, catarrh, rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, tired feeling, general debility.

Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies and enriches the blood, and in so doing renders the human system a healthy service possible. This medicine has been tested for years. It is perfectly pure, clean and absolutely safe, as well as a peculiar and unequalled medicinal.

Get Hood's, and get it now from any drug store.

Quick, Safe Way

To Remove Hairs

(Toilet Talks.)

Keep a little delatone powder on your dressing table and when ugly, hairy growths appear, make a paste with a little of the powder and some water, apply and let remain on the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off. This treatment is quite harmless and rarely more than one application is required, but to avoid disappointment care should be used to buy the real delatone—Adv.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

STREET RAILWAY FARES.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

The manager of the London Street Railway Company asks what we would do if we owned the London street railway? If Mr. King really intends someone to suggest, I would say that the first thing I would do is to let the London street railway be run by the people. The service is equally as cheap. A couple of days ago, the writer got on the C. P. R. train, and walked, no car being in sight, and got as far as Dundas before the first car caught up to me. I have often walked from Adelaide to Richmond without a car overtaking me. In the evenings, very little if any provision is made to take care of the working people from the factories. If I owned the street railway I would put some pepper into every employee and speed up those old cars. If they got out of that way of snailing along, there would be better car service, less over to Chicago or Detroit, and see if you see a street car dragging and grinding along like you see here. See if you have to wait for an age for a car standing out these cold days. If I owned the street railway I would first of all make it something for the people. I would not make money on my investment, I would go to the city and ask them to let me have the efficient look-alikes at such a price that I would not water or promote stock. I would have the people satisfied that I had in the railway a definite percentage of profit. I would have the people satisfied that I had in the railway a definite percentage of profit. I would have the people satisfied that I had in the railway a definite percentage of profit.

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

FRUIT SALT

Famous for Forty years

Settles the Stomach

Stimulates the Liver

Strengthens Digestion

Purifies the Blood

20

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to a definite percentage of profit. If at any time the earnings of the road

shouting a willingness to co-operate with the people. Under these circumstances we should get down to brass tacks. Letters published in your columns reveal the prevalence of the opinion that the company is seeking higher fares for the purpose of gubbing great profits when conditions return to normal and costs come down after the war. There should be some means of safeguarding the people's interests, and the only way to do that is to give the people a voice in the affairs of the road. I would suggest that this could be accomplished by holding the company down to