SCOTLAND AND CHURCH UNION.

Scotland, once proverbial for the multiplicity and intricacy of its religious differences and the rancor and bitterness of its sectarian controversies, has not remained unaffected by the modern spirit of liberty and toleration. Even the vexed question of disestablishment has ceased from troubling since the late Dr. Hutton, the last of the old worthies who carried it over on his soul, passed within the veil. Thirty years ago disestablishment was a political issue, so much so indeed that Mr. Gladstone's acceptance of it cost the Liberal party in Scotland many able and influential supporters, who were thus compelled to choose between their church and their political friends, and, incidentally, caused the loss of the university seat for Edinburgh and St. Andrew's in the house of commons. Now the word that once was as blessed to the Radical ear as Messianism was to the old Scotsman's heart, the occasionally heard, is no longer a rallying cry on the political field.

Yet it would be a mistake to hold that the existence of an established church is without bearing on the future of Presbyterianism in Scotland. Among the signs of the times not the least interesting and noteworthy is the desire expressed by really representative ministers and laymen belonging to the two main Presbyterian churches for closer union. Admittedly the relations between them have never been more cordially friendly and the strength and number of their points of agreement exceeding in real importance those which they differ. A growing sense of the evils of separation in the case of religious bodies professing the same standards of belief and forms of government led the Church of Scotland at last year's general assembly to propose a conference of all denominations for the purpose of considering methods of co-operation. The appeal was disregarded by the four small bodies—Reformed Presbyterian, Original Seceders, Free Presbyterians, and Free Churchmen—that represent in the twentieth century the habits and temper of the eighteenth.

Altho the recent United Free Church General Assembly rejected the proposal in form, it was only to pass a resolution which more than met the Church of Scotland in spirit. Holding that there were considerations which to their mind rendered impracticable, the United Free Churchmen approved a motion declaring their readiness "to enter into unrestricted conference with their brethren of the Church of Scotland on the existing ecclesiastical situation and on the main causes which keep the churches apart, with the earnest hope that by God's blessing, misunderstanding and hindrances may be removed, and the great object of Presbyterian reunion in Scotland thereby advanced." To this declaration the Church of Scotland will no doubt respond sympathetically and a conference carried out in the spirit of the resolution quoted cannot fail to be helpful, even if it prove unsuccessful. For it cannot be ignored that the one formidable difficulty in the path of union is the connection of the Church of Scotland with the state. Possibly were Scotland alone to be considered, a way of escape might be found, and Lord Guthrie, one of the judges of the supreme court of Scotland and a prominent United Free Churchman, suggested indeed that it might be possible to obtain guarantees from parliament which would satisfy the most zealous opponent of state alliance. But the bearing of legislation of that kind on the church situation in England may prove an insuperable barrier to the obtaining by a United Church of Scotland of practical independence.

VALUE OF WATER POWER.

How wise was the policy of the present provincial government in withdrawing the water powers of the province from private exploitation is remarkably revealed by the fact that there are now pending in the United States Congress more than forty water-power grab bills. These are promoted by corporations out after the acquisition of these vast energy-producing resources without compensation of any kind to the people whose property they are. In the June number of Hampton's Magazine John L. Matthews a water-power expert, calls on President Taft to curb the growth of what he declares will be the most powerful trust and the most detrimental to the public interest that the United States has yet known. In his own words: "A new monopoly more terrible than has yet threatened the country, paying nothing, demanding all, its members have gone to congress and borne away perpetual franchises to the greatest of our last remaining resources. Only the determined stand of President Roosevelt and Forester Gifford has so far come between them and victory." This last reference is to the Rainy River dam bill which was vetoed by the late president, but was passed over his veto after the committee had agreed to limit its grant to ninety-nine years and accepted regulation by the secretary of war of the charges to be made for power before speaking of the grab bills now before congress, Mr. Matthews says:—

"Two great corporations, the Westinghouse and the General Electric, and other smaller corporations which are said to be subsidiaries of these two great companies, already control more than half of the most valuable water power in the country—that which falls down from the Appalachians from the Potomac to the River southward to the Gulf. Many of the applicants for grants were dummies for the corporations, and it was evident that there was a 'hurry-up' rush on foot to grab, before the people woke up, the greater part of the yet undeveloped power of the nation."

"Nor was the importance of this to be seen at once, or to be realized until first the president and then the people could be made to grasp the tremendous importance of water power. For generations we had used it sparingly, turning with it no machinery which could not be reached from the water-spun turbine by a belt or shaft. Suddenly in a wonderfully short time, we have entered and advanced far in a new series of inventions by which we are able to develop power at any falls, in the form of electricity, and carry it even hundreds of miles, with but slight loss, to be used for commercial purposes wherever needed. In ten years we will be sending power one thousand miles, and the most remote mountain streams will be contributing to run our railways, to light our cities, to take the smoke from our factories and even to do the ordinary work about our farms and homes—lighting, heating, plowing, milking, churning, ironing, cooking and all that coal and animal power do now."

"There is in the United States developed and unharvested in our rivers and brooks more than fifty million horse power in water capable of being turned into electrical energy and transmitted to homes, farms and factories. This can perhaps be increased 50 or even 100 per cent by proper conservation. Yet even in the original figure it means the equivalent of six hundred and fifty million tons of coal every year mined, transported and consumed; or, as we waste half of our coal in getting it to the ground, it represents the diminution of one billion three hundred tons in our available supply of coal. We actually mine and send to market about five million tons of coal. So the water power, the bulk of which we are giving over to monopoly, represents more than the equivalent of all our coal; represents the only hope for cheap living; represents a fuel or source of power which while controlled by the people can be used for public income and for regulating costs; but which when alienated, we are alienating it, will create a trust that will make of the meat trust a pimple and that by simply adding pennies to its charges will reduce us to a slavery which would make the Standard Oil magnates gasp with envy. Such a state of affairs would surely produce a revolution. Only a sane and radical action can avoid such a contingency."

DAVID WARFIELD'S VISIT.

David Warfield's reputation as an actor of unusually delicate and refined artistic quality, made entirely in the United States, extends beyond its confines. It is not often in these days of easy travel that an artist of exceptional parts confines himself exclusively to his own country. That Mr. Warfield has hitherto done so testifies to the solid basis of his popularity. Toronto is the first and will be so far the only Canadian city given the opportunity to see him in one of his most characteristic roles and this sufficient shows the place the Queen City holds in theatrical circles. Very considerable public interest has already been evinced in this engagement and lovers of the higher drama have reason to recognize the enterprise that is bringing Mr. Warfield to the Royal Alexandra next week.

THE SHERIFF IN BRANT.

Editor World: You apparently are not afraid to express your opinions on all matters, and it would be well were there more like you. As to the appointment of sheriff for Brant, I notice that Mr. Reville of The Courier has it, this is all right. In North Oxford things are different. Appointments are like hens' teeth, and when made, the Reformers' feelings are considered first. Only lately the deputy registrarship was given to a lady and one license inspector appointed by our party was a Reformer. There are parties here holding office who certainly are of no use to our party in North Oxford. Our party in North Oxford is certain growing. (3.)

Judge's Chambers.

Before Lathford, J.
Dobner v. Hodgins—W. E. Middleton, K. C., for plaintiff, on appeal from the local registrar at St. Catharines, moved to set aside the costs of this action on the county court scale. Grayson Smith, for defendant, contra. Judgment (H.). The action was for $200 on a promissory note. The defence alleged fraud on the part of the plaintiff and one Williams in procuring the note from the defendant. Judgment was entered for plaintiff for $200, interest and costs. Nothing is said as to the scale of costs. Plaintiff contends that the question of title to land is raised by the defence, and that therefore the action does not fall within the jurisdiction of the district court. As between the parties it is declared that the land is not in question in the remotest manner. The action could therefore have been brought in the district court. Re 112 has been properly applied by the taxing officer, and the appeal from his decision should be dismissed with costs.
