Mr. Armstrong replied to the letter, pointing out that the fund did not provide for transportation, but he would place the letter before a meeting of the

The "little man with the steam-look voice" had nothing on a quintette that gave a few selections from the safety of one of the rooms in a King street hotel this morning about three o'clock. The calm stillness of this peaceful city tel this morning about three o'clock. The calm stillness of this peaceful city was shattered when the five visitors, out for a good time and apparently anxious to have everyone know they were having it, started on their vocal programme. Everything from Tosti's Good Bye to That Mysterious Rag leaked—nay, flowed—through the open window and flooded the street, and through the transom, also open, into the house. The man in charge of the hotel was bearing up well under the awful strain until The Soldiers of the King record was started. The tenor rose higher and higher; the bass dropped and dropped and the three nondescript voices in between howled out their loyalty in voluminous roars.

The manager's patience was stretched to the breaking point. A gentle tap on the room door and the disturbed lord of the house entered, explained his errand and retired. The quintette did likewise while all over the house the guests turned over and dropped back into their interrupted sleep. And the five vocalists still assert that "It's the soldiers of the King, my lads, etc."

In cooking their supper. The return will be made on Saturday evening.

A Few Rejections.

As the Times announced some days ago there have been a few rejections of members from local units at Valcartier although the statement was contradicted. These rejections might have been expected considering the very large force of men mustered at the camp, as there are nearly 10,000 in excess of the number required. It is satisfactory to note, however, that the number turned back from St. John is not large. One man from Fairville has already arrived home, while two who were rejected from the Army Service detachment are expected in a few days. That only two of the weeding process is very complimentary
