"We are living in a history-making he continued. The problems of drawing closer the outlying parts of the Empire was engaging attention now a degree never known before. There had in the last few years been several important Imperial conferences in London. There had been the Colonial conference in 1907. And then a resolution had been brought forward for the All-Red Route, aiming at linking up the transportation systems of the Empire under one flag. In this Lord Strathcona, his "juvenile friend," had been the leading spirit. They had him (Lord Strathcona) with them to-day, wonderful old man. Talking to him few minutes previously. His Excelency explained, Lord Strathcona, in reply to a query, said that he was suffering from a little cold but otherwise was all right. The latest Imperial gathering had een the Defence conference, attended by delegates from all the colonies. He had not been officially informed of what had been the result of the deliberations of that body, nor had he read the newspaper reports very closely, but he was under the impression that the people of the United Kingdom had in effect informed the people of the colonies:
"We will form a ring around you and while you have time to grow strong; and you on your part may build fleets of your own, so lay the foundation of ir naval strength, so that you may around us for the defence of the Em-
