New Game.

An amusing and more or less instructive game has been devised by a young woman, who once a week takes it upon herself to entertain a company of boys and girls for the afternoon.

She writes on sheets of paper several stanzas of good poetry, leaving a wide space between the lines. She then cuts up the sheets, leaving one line of poetry on each strip.

After that she hides the strips in many different places in the two rooms in which she is to entertain her guests, reserving the first line of each verse.

These reserved strips she distributes among the girls and boys, and each one proceeds to hunt for the rest of his stanza.

The hostess usually selects stanzas from different poems, so that the variations in rhythm and meter may help her young guests to select the lines which belong to them; but sometimes, to make the test more difficult, she chooses several stanzas from the same poem.

The number of lines in a stanza is indicated on the slips reserved for distribution.

Sometimes amusing misplacements of lines are made, but the hostess is pleased to notice that as the weeks go on, her guests are growing more and more clever in seizing upon what belongs to them. When all the lines have been collected each one reads his stanza, and to her delight the hostess finds that the interest of the search, and the constant repetition of a line to see what will fit next to it, has often made a boy or girl so familiar with the stanza that it can be recited without a glance at the slips.

THINGS OF VALUE.

"I have just room for one good story," said the night editor, "but there seems to be nothing in sight."

"Has the daily Roosevelt rescue story come in yet?" asked the managing editor.

"Not yet."

"Well, there's no need to worry, then. We'll surely get it before we go to press."

There never was, and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient, what would relieve one ill, in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in a sound unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use, the feeblest systems are led into confidence and strength, by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restorative. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquillizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep. It imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making a necessary remedy, strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—namely, improved appetite. Norham & Lyman of Toronto, have given to the public their superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, sustained by the opinion of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

Superintendent of the company addressing the general manager—There's no help for it; we'll have to take out the Venus' phone.

Manager—What's the latest complaint?

Superintendent—She's better, the wire six minutes yesterday, flitting by Jupiter!

THEY ARE CAREFULLY PREPARED.—Pills which dissipate themselves in the stomach cannot be expected to have much effect upon the intestines, and to overcome constipation the medicine administered must influence the action of these canals. Farm-er's Vegetable Pills are so made, under the supervision of experts, that the substance in them is intended to operate on the intestines and retard in action until they pass through the stomach to the bowels.

"That will be a popular song," commented the composer's friend.

"It is as bad as that," groaned the composer.

"And we left him alone in his grief."

A SMALL PILL, BUT POWERFUL.—They that judge of the powers of a pill by its size, would consider Farm-er's Vegetable Pills to be lacking. It is a wonder among pills. What it lacks in size it makes up in potency. The remedies which it carries are put up in these small doses, because they are so powerful that only small doses are required. The full strength of the extracts is secured in this form and do their work thoroughly.

"That fellow Blifkins seems an awful chump, doesn't he?"

"Yes, he does. He's just the sort of blithering idiot who would yell 'fire' in a crowded theatre."

Tell the Dead.—Mr. J. F. Kellock, Druggist, Perth, writes: "A visitor of mine, having heard of despatch by the use of Dr. THOMAS' EUCALYPTIC OIL, wrote to Ireland, telling his friends there of the cure. In consequence I received an order to send half a dozen by express to Wexford, Ireland, this week."

Sympathiser.—Never mind, old man. You're down on your luck now, but wait till Fortune's wheel turns.

Lockless One.—Hang it, it looks as if I had lost all hold on the blasted wheel!

There are so many cough medicines in the market, that it is sometimes difficult to tell which to buy; but if we had a bad cough, a cold, or any affliction of the throat or lungs, we would try Eickie's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. Those who have used it think it is far ahead of all other preparations recommended for such complaints. The little folks like it as a pleasant as syrup.

Useful Dogs.

America possesses some well-trained dogs, for Mr. C. J. Cornish, writing in the Cornhill Magazine, points to the great sheep-ranchers of North America and to the estancia of Argentina, as places where the dog plays a very important and creditable part in the industry of the neighborhood.

He considers the Argentine method of training the sheep dog the more complete, because by it the dog becomes part of the flock. The puppies are suckled by a ewe, and when grown are fed only on vegetable food and milk, for which they visit the estancia, and having devoured it rush back to their flock, pursued by the farm dogs. When they reach the flock they seem at once to gain courage, and turn on their pursuers. They guard the sheep both night and day, and also assist the shepherds to drive them or collect them on the pastures.

Speaking of the American dogs, the writer says that in the mountain districts of Colorado sheep dogs have been imported from countries as far distant as New Zealand. The most noted breed in Colorado is descended from a pair of these dogs, and then offspring have an inherited gift for shepherding.

A six months old puppy was employed with others in getting sixteen hundred sheep into a corral before a blizzard. When the snow began to fall it was found that two hundred sheep were missing, and that the puppy was nowhere to be seen.

The herders hunted all that night and part of the next day. Then the two hundred sheep were found driven into a little gully, with the puppy standing on guard. The dog had been thirty six hours without food or water, and died from exposure followed by injudicious sympathy in the form of overfeeding.

This occurred near Fort Collins in Colorado. The mother of this puppy was one day missed at supper. She was found at the corral, guarding a gate that a shepherd had left open the night before.

Mrs Whoop—What do you think of my new rainy-day costume, dear?

Mr. Whoop—I think that if Noah had thought of it in time he wouldn't have built the ark.
