WHAT WOULD THEY PAY REAL FIGHTERS TODAY?

PROHIBITORY LAW

Ring champions of other days emit moans every time they think about the money that is being paid to the battlers of this era.

In the bygone time the warriors used to think that Fortune heaved its sweetest smile at them if they got a thousand or two for their efforts. Now, a top-notch sniffs at anything that doesn't run far along into the five figures.

Frank Moran received $25,000 for his efforts against Jack Dillon recently, and Dillon drew down $15,000. That's a $40,000 purse: a sum far beyond anything that even the greatest champions of the old days received. And both men are non-champions.

The chances are that neither ever will become the king of his division. Jess Willard is too healthy.

The old boys fought better, harder and longer than the present crop of ringsters," said Jack McAuliffe, the only retired champion. "If the present fighters get from $10,000 to $25,000 or $30,000 for their efforts, then the men of other days ought to have got about four times as much. But they didn't. They got about one-fifth or less."

Fittsimmons fought many fights for less than $1,000. Corbett, as shrewd as he was in a financial way, frequently battled over a decision route for about one-twentieth of what Moran will get for ten short rounds. McCoy, Sharkey, Jeffries, Sullivan, and the other heavies oftentimes got as much for a whole fight as some of the men of today get for one round.

Joe Gans ranked as the greatest lightweight of all time, earned about as much during his entire ring career as Freddie Walsh, the "joke champ," has garnered in the last year or so. And Gans fought real fights while Walsh has done little else than to give the folks dancing exhibitions.

And so it goes.

Washington, July 14.—Tragic stories of attacks by sharks upon bathers along the New Jersey coast were discussed at today's meeting of the cabinet. Later Secretary McAdoo announced that the coast guard would be ordered to do what it could toward clearing the coast of the dangerous fish, and preventing further loss of life.

Newcastle, July 14.—The meeting of Newcastle Town Improvement League, at its regular monthly meeting last night, decided that the Provincial Prohibition Act was much preferable to the Scott Act and determined to take steps to have the latter repealed as soon as possible. The meeting adjourned till next Monday evening to consider appointment of committees, etc.

The community was shocked by the untimely death Wednesday evening of Edith, wife of Fish Warden Murdoch Sutherland, of Redbank, aged 56 years. She had been ill only a short time. She was brought to Newcastle hospital Sunday, but was found to be too weak to undergo an operation. She was a member of the Presbyterian church, a native of Little South West, and leaves a large family of sons and daughters—Jed, Melvin, John, Miller and Norman, all of Redbank; Mark, of Rexton; Mrs. Brynton, of Redbank; Mrs. Melvin Carter, Millerton; Mrs. Lawrence Mather, Newcastle, and Misses Annie and Irene at home. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Wallace Johnstone, of Halcomb, and the following brothers:

New York, July 14.—A news agency despatch from Rome today says: "Pope Benedict, it is reported in church circles here, is preparing to issue a second appeal for peace on the occasion of the second anniversary of the beginning of the war, now only two weeks away."

The issuance of the appeal depends upon the successes of the Allies in their present offensive. If the Anglo-French forces, for example, have made a wide breach in the German lines, and are steadily pushing back the enemy as the anniversary draws near, His Holiness will regard the time as inopportune, and will have little or nothing to say regarding peace."

Zurich, via Paris, July 14.—Members of the Austrian imperial family have been summoned to Schoenbrunn, owing to the illness of the Emperor Franz Joseph, according to news despatches from Innsbruck. Several specialists are attending the aged kaiser, and the news of the war is being withheld from him.

Principal J. D. Keane will spend his vacation in Boston.

Dr. Gordon Atkinson of Boston is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Atkinson.
