The crew refusing to proceed Capt. Saturday evening and sunrise Monday McGrath was compelled to put back to this port, arriving at the Island last evening. The captain thinks the leak is caused by a trundle hole. A rumor was affoat this forenoon that the vessel was ashore near Little River; this the captain most emphatically denies.

The attention of the court was occupied this morning with the case of W. H. Brown vs. Beard and Milledge and Beard. This is an action to recover the amount of account alleged to be due the plaintiff for iron work done on a vessel of which the defendents were part owners. The defendents are endeavoring to show that the work for which they are liable has been paid for in full. The court adjourned at 1 o'clock and the case will be continued this afternoon.

London, Feb. 2. A STORM OF UNPARALLELED VIOLENCE. The British isles were visited last-night by one of the most violent storms ever experienced, even at this season of the year. The snow fell to an extraordinary depth in the city and country. This morning it was MARSTERS six inches deep in London, and travel was almost wholly suspended. Omnibuses and cabs ceased running, and scarcely a vehicle of any description has been seen all day. In the provinces the fall was much heavier. A gale raged with great fury all around the English and Irish coasts. Many wrecks are already reported, and a fearful loss of life, especially at Torquay and around the Scilly islands. The steamer on Blackhead and became a total wreck. It is feared that all on board were lost.
