CULINARY CONCEITS.

Add a squeeze of a lemon to scrambled eggs while they are cooking.

To try when a cake is done hold your ear down and listen. If it has ceased sounding, it is done.

Potatoes cooked in their skins contain the nutriment that is quite lost if they are peeled before cooking.

To prevent the lower crust of any custard or juicy pie from becoming soggy sprinkle it before filling with fine breadcrumbs.

A garnish for the mutton platter may be prepared from a cupful of rice boiled until it is tender and mixed with one-half can of Spanish peppers chopped very fine.

When boiling fish, let it come gently to a bubble after putting it in the boiling water, then allow it to cook just below the boiling point. If it were boiled at the galloping point, the fish would fall to pieces.

Chicken livers on skewers are an excellent luncheon dish. Divide each liver into two or three parts and boil till tender, then place on long silver plated skewers, alternating with pieces of bacon, and fry in a hot pan, serving hot on toast.

What Makes True Hospitality.

A "born" hostess can set her guests down to graham crackers, jam and a cup of coffee or even cold water, and so delightful may be the conversation, so ready the wit, so kindly and so warm with genuine friendliness and selflessness the welcome, that each one might say: "With wheaten bread was my spirit fed." 'Twas red wine I quaffed with my thirsty soul." It is not money, but individuality, that determines the success or failure of the entertainer.

That subtle something which contributes to the making of the truly hospitable hostess rests within herself and cannot be measured by the wages that are paid to her cook or by the sum spent for flowers or professional entertainers, writes the Advance.

When Hawthorne and his wife were visiting in Rome, a young girl studying art there, said to be the original of "Hilda in the Tower," desiring to honor her country people, invited them to her apartment up many flights during their call serving them with crackers and tea. Among the elaborate courtesies offered the famous writer during his travels only of the hospitality of this sincere souled American girl did he make printed mention.

American Women Particular.

It must be very hard for a dressmaker to go home without bringing something entirely new to a class of women who must have something new, whether or no. The American woman is far more exacting than the Frenchwoman. Very few of the latter demand an entirely new style, provided they are dressed with faultless taste. With new styles in the often unnoticed details, they are satisfied.

Not so is the average American woman. She desires to make a sensation with her clothes on the spot; strike the eye with something pronounced. Now, the American woman who habitually gets her gown in Paris soon learns to abide by the quiet taste of her countrymen, and she then becomes to the eyes of those who know the most beautiful, the most graceful, because she is the handsomest woman in the world and the most distinguished also—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Poem In Brown.

"No color is so capable of a distinctive effect as brown," remarked the observing woman. "A girl got on a car at whom the ill bred simply stared, and even the well bred took more than one satisfying peep at her. She wore a walking suit of a warm golden brown color and a shirt waist of creamy brown silk. Her gloves and stock were golden silk. Her hat was a brown felt, with wings laid flat on it. It turned up a little each side in back, and from it fell a big bow of wide, soft silk the color of the gown and tucked across the crown. Her eyes were big and brown, her hair was brown and her complexion a clear cream and pink. She was altogether too dainty for description. Of course it takes the right person to carry out a brown scheme, but when it is done it is vastly more effective than grays and blacks, not to speak of blues and greens and reds."

Small Feet.

Little feet are a deformity, or, rather, feet too small to harmonize with the figure are. Better that the foot be too large, if shapely, than too small.

Think of a Juno who stands 5 feet 7 inches and tips the scales at 150 pounds teetering to and fro on No. 1 or No. 2 feet! She should have a No. 4 foot at the very least, and a No. 6 would not be out of proportion.

To judge by the ideas of the Greeks and Romans, beautiful feet are those which are large enough to carry the body most gracefully. The ancients admired a stately carriage. Latin poets speak of the gait of their beauties rather than of their feet.

Mold In the Cellar.

Mold that settles on wooden furniture or woodwork in the cellar or any damp place is best met by kerosene oil. Sometimes a vigorous rubbing is necessary to destroy the pest. A coat of whitewash applied to a damp cellar will completely dry it out. If, in spite of this precaution, mold appears in spots on the floor of the cellar, set boxes of unsifted lime about and throw a little of it over the patches of mold that have appeared.

Brooms.

If brooms are wet in boiling soap suds at least once a week, they will become very tough, will not cut the carpet, and the wisps will not fall out. The broom will last very much longer and sweep easier.

THE MYSTERIOUS VISITOR IS NOW INVADING MANY HOMES.

It Strikes Young and Old Who Are Physically Weak and Predisposed to Disease

Paine's Celery Compound

Fortifies the Body, Cleanses the Blood and Gives Strength to Resist
All Attacks.

That mysterious visitor "Grip" is now invading many homes and striking down the young and old who are weak or predisposed to disease. It is now well known that the disease spreads rapidly to the various members of the household into which it has been introduced. It accords with the theory of infection also, that the disease has usually attacked the persons liable to infection. Dr. Richard Sisley, in his book on "Epidemic Influenza," says the disease is almost entirely propagated by infection.

In past winter seasons it has been fully and happily demonstrated that Paine's Celery Compound is a tower of safety when Grip is prevalent. When this scientific and health-giving medicine is used, it strengthens the nervous centres of all the vital organs; it purifies the blood, regulates digestion, gives a healthy tone to the whole system, enabling young and old to feel secure from the ravages of disease. Weak, nervous, dyspeptic and ailing people will find in Paine's Celery Compound a true protector and shield from the dangers of Grip. A trial of one bottle will banish all existing doubts.

Continually Misunderstood.

Mr. Archibald S. Hurd, of London, in a lengthy and very interesting article on "The Foreign Invasion of Canada," reads off with saying "Canada is the one colony which has been continually misunderstood in England. Just as the English people were awakening to its real character and were beginning to take an interest in its future, Mr. Rudyard Kipling checked the movement with a phrase, Canada is 'My Lady of the Snows' in the imagination of Englishmen. In the minds of nine out of ten persons in the old country Canada stands for the Siberia of the British Empire, a country in which residents suffer the most terrible hardships owing to the extreme cold which is supposed to wrap the country around for seven or eight months together, bringing all industrial and social life to a standstill."

News-gathering, not fighting, is the trade of the war correspondent. But it is news at any personal cost, and a fine unpremeditated heroism often goes with the gathering of it.

One morning after the siege of Paris, when the city was believed in London to be still in the hands of the Commune, Sir John Robinson, manager of The Daily News of London, reached his office to find the late Archibald Forbes lying on the floor asleep, his head on a post-office directory, while the printers were hard at work on his manuscript, the story of "Paris in Flames," a most vivid description of the last days of the Commune.

"Forbes had telegraphed from Denver announcing his coming," said Sir John Robinson, at the recent unveiling in St. Paul's Cathedral of a memorial to the famous war correspondent, "the printers had been waiting, and thus the country heard of those terrible days for the first time."

London was ablaze with excitement. Boulevard Street was impassable and through the newboys shrieking for copies, and in Parliament Mr. Gladstone was questioned. The printers had been waiting, and thus the country heard of those terrible days for the first time.

When Forbes was awakened from his slumber amid all this turmoil, what a spectacle he was! His face was black with powder, his eyes red and inflamed, his clothes matted with clay and dust, he was a dreadful picture. He had been compelled to assist the Communists in defending a triangular space upon which three detachments of the Versailles troops were firing, and had actually taught the citizens how to build a barricade.

By aid of dummy despatches, addressed to Lord Granville and the Queen, Forbes escaped from this threatening triangle, and wrote all the way to London, being the solitary passenger on the mail boat across the Channel.

Education and Leadership. A few weeks ago Lord Selborne illuminated one of his speeches by saying that leaders were born and not made, and that character counted for more than intellectual attainments in the Navy. This is perfectly true, nevertheless promotion is based on the assumption that the reverse is the case. It is undeniable that French and German officers possess more general knowledge than the British officer, and a sounder knowledge of their profession. It is, however, he who leaves them far behind as a leader of men. It was character that made England what she is, and it is by character that her position will be maintained. The man who lacks the true quality of leadership is the man who despises knowledge, not the man who possesses it. We have arrived at a noble conception of life again when we pay homage to both. A few years ago we paid homage to neither; hence the diplomatic and military humiliations in South Africa—Broad Arrow.

Where Shots Strike. Of every 110 shots which strike some soldier, forty-three will lodge in the legs, thirty-three shots will lodge in the arms, twenty-two strike between neck and waist, and one on the head some part of the soldier's head.

YET CAN-DA IS SHUT OUT.

Facts About "The Roast Beef of Old England" English Breeders Turning Attention to Dairy Farming.

"The Roast Beef of Old England" is mostly cattle, and the tendency of foreign cattle, and the tendency of home-bred beef to decrease is growing. Many English breeders now devote more attention to dairy farming than to cattle-breeding. It is becoming a serious question whether we are to have any beef at all, except at prohibitive prices. The consumer is at present paying nearly 20 per cent. more for his beef than last year, and in the opinion of traders, prices will go still higher during the coming winter. A number of small shopkeepers, as our representative has ascertained, have been financially crippled by a shrinkage of business resulting from the inability of the poorer classes to purchase at the present rates. The wholesale trade inevitably suffers in his turn from the failure of retailers to meet their business engagements. In view of this serious position of affairs, which threatens one of the most important sources of the people's food, there is a growing demand that the embargo shall be removed from the importation of Canadian and Argentine cattle. For nearly two years our ports have been closed to Argentine cattle, as a preventive against the introduction of the foot-and-mouth disease. But the Argentine is stated to be now free from the disease, and a departmental official of the Board of Agriculture admitted to our representative that an offer of the Argentine Government to defray the cost of the expert examination of its herds in order to demonstrate their immunity from disease had been "heard of" at the Board of Agriculture.

Mr. Hanbury (the president of the board), however, saw no necessity for accepting it. The Minister's claim to be acting in "the interests of the English farmers" certainly suggests that his action is dictated more by the desire of protecting British cattle-breeding from foreign competition than by the fear of a disease which is, as far as he has any reason to believe, extinct in the country on which his embargo is laid. But the interests of the whole people are of more importance than the interests of the farmers, and this insidious form of protection deserves the indignation which it has raised. It is as futile, as it is unjust, for it has not encouraged the British farmer to engage more extensively in cattle-breeding.—London Chronicle.

SAVED FROM THE GRAVE

What T. C. Marsh Says Dodd's
Kidney Pills Did for Him

Story of a Nova Scotia Man who had Almost Given Up Hope of ever being Well Again.

Central Economy, N. S.—Jan. 12. — (Special).—"I feel as if Dodd's Kidney Pills have saved me from the grave," is the way T. C. Marsh, of this place, talks of those wonderful exterminators of the pains and aches arising from Diseased Kidneys. And Mr. Marsh could know, whereof he speaks. He was under the doctor's care for Kidney Complaint for some time, and, despite their efforts, continued to grow worse. He was almost in despair when a friend advised him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. In such a severe case the progress towards recovery was naturally slow, but he persevered, and now he feels justified in using the strong words quoted above. Mr. Marsh thus describes his case:

"I was under the doctor's care, but didn't seem to get any better, only worse. I was advised by a friend to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. After I had used them for a time, I began to feel a difference, and I never stopped till I had used 22 boxes. I suppose I still have to use something as long as I live, but I feel as if Dodd's Kidney Pills had saved me from the grave. I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to everyone because of what they have done for me."

Youth is the only comrade for youth. All else is evasion of life's laws.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
