

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Kiss Of Judas

He laughs with a half tone of bitterness. "My father doesn't care where I go or with whom I walk, so that I don't trouble him."
"I am so sorry," she murmurs, sweetly, so sweetly that he draws a little nearer. "I thought that rich people, lords especially, were always happy, and that the world was made for them!"
"You were wrong," he says. "I am an instance of the contrary."
She looks up at him sympathetically. "I shall think differently in future," she says.

"Do!" he says. "When you think of a lord, like myself, picture a solitary young fellow living by himself, with scarcely a friend to come to, and finding life a bore. There is no music in the trees for me—not a note. Can you hear it still?"

"What?" she asks.
"The music of the trees," he says.
"I can hear the music of the stream. And that reminds me that we ought to cross here. Dear me!"
"What's the matter?" he asks.

"Why, the river is awfully swollen. It is the rain of last week! The stepping stones are almost covered!"
He looks down at the river and nods assent.

At the point at which they stopped there is a rude and rough ford made of stepping stones, which the swollen river has nearly obliterated.

"Here is where we ought to cross," she says, her brows knitted with perplexity.
"Not half of the stones are visible," he says. "We shall have to go back."

She pulls out her watch, and consults it thoughtfully.
"Go back!" she says. "Why! It will take a couple of hours! And by that time grandpa will be in a fit! We must cross it!"

"You will get wet," he says.
She laughs.
"I can't help that! We must cross here!" and she runs down the bank, and stands looking at the brawling stream that breaks noiselessly over the stones.

"Let me give you a hand," he says; and standing in the water he extends both hands.
She shrinks back with an exclamation of dismay.
"You are standing in the water!" she says.

He laughs carelessly.
"What does it matter?" he rejoins, looking at her as she holds back from his extended hands. "It won't hurt me, but you must not get wet. Put both your hands in mine, and come slowly."

She hesitates a moment, then puts her small hands into his strong ones, which close over them firmly, and steps onto the first stone.

"Now, then," he says, wading half way toward the next one, "be careful! I am not afraid!"
"I am not afraid!" she says, feeling the firm grip of his hands, which seem to swallow hers and yet to hold them so tenderly.

"Bravo!" he exclaims, as she reaches stone No. 2. "That was first-rate!"
"How deep the water is," she says, ruefully, looking down at his legs, against which the stream is rushing angrily. "How terribly wet you will get!"

"Please don't think of me," he says, pleadingly. "It will do me good. Now for the next one!"
"It is rather a long way!" she says, doubtfully; but she manages to reach it, and no sooner has she done so than she utters a faint cry of dismay.

"What's the matter?" he says, holding her hands tightly and pressing a little nearer.
"Don't you see?" she says, nodding in front of her. "The next stone is under water!"

"By Jove! so it is!" he says.
"I don't know. And I feel as if I were going to fall," she adds, laughing, but with a little dash of nervous color in her lovely face.

"Lean your arm on my shoulder," he says, coming closer. She does so. "Lean hard," he insists; "you will feel steadier."

"Thank you—you are very kind; and the water is almost up to your knees!"
"Never mind me!" he repeats.
"What's to be done? Will you go back?"

Even as he makes the suggestion, he knows that it is a useless one, as she could not possibly turn around on the sloping, slippery stone. He knows, too, the answer to that last question—the only way of solving the difficulty. If she were his sister, he should make no more ado but take her up in his arms and carry her across. He could do it as easily as carry a baby. But he dare not even think it, even to himself! It would be sacrilege. But still, what is to be done? Every moment he feels the arm resting upon his shoulder grow more uncertain and unsteady.

"I must go back!" she says, trying to laugh, but looking at him with the sweetest dismay in her lovely eyes; then she looks over her shoulder, and her face grows more troubled. "No! I could not. I must wade—after all, it doesn't matter. It is quite warm!"

"What!" he exclaims, with horror. "You wade? Why the water is awfully deep a little further on. I know. Besides, you don't suppose I would let you!"
She laughs—a troubled laugh.
"But I must. I can't stay here till the stream runs down!"
"No," he says; then, with a leap of the heart, he adds, trying to speak carelessly: "I shall have to carry you."

He makes the bold proposition, avoiding her eyes and looking straight beyond her, and so does not see the

FIG PILLS
For Kidney and Liver Trouble, Constipation and Rheumatism

Mr. Abe Freeman, 193 Dowling Avenue, Toronto, Ont., says: I have been a great sufferer for a number of years with dyspepsia and constipation. I have taken dollars' worth of medicine but I never got relief. I had decided that there was nothing more that would cure me. One day a friend advised me to try Fig Pills. I bought a box, and before I had taken half of the box I felt better. I have taken four boxes and to-day I am a new man. Fig Pills have certainly done wonders for me. Fig Pills are a positive cure for all kidney, liver and stomach trouble, sour stomach, heartburn, bilious headache and dyspepsia. 25c. box wide-open surprise in hers, and the swift, sudden flash of color.

"Oh, no!" she says, softly. "I'll go back, please."
A wild courage takes possession of him.
"Look here," he says, with suppressed eagerness; "you can't go back; you can't turn on this wretched stone, and you can't wade. Why, it might be the death of you, a delicate girl!"
"I'm not delicate; I'm very strong!"
"I don't care," he rejoins, waxing bolder each moment. "Anyhow, you'd get fearfully wet, and would be sure to take cold! Besides, if you won't think of yourself, think of me."
"O you!" with wide-open eyes.
"Yes! Remember what hard work it was to get Mr. Temple's consent to your coming with me, and how I had to promise to take care of you! Pretty kind of care it would be if I let you go back wet though, to take a dangerous illness!"

She laughs softly at his rough earnestness, and, encouraged, though she did not mean it for encouragement, he draws nearer to her, and puts his arm around her waist. Even at that moment his reverence for her almost daunts him, and he stands with a strange look in his eyes and a sudden quiver of the lips.

And yet it is not the first time he has had his arm around a lady's waist; he has waltzed with many a beautiful woman and never felt any shyness, anything of the strange awe and shrinking sense of outrage that takes possession of him now.

INSURRECTION IN CUBAN REPUBLIC

Believed to be More Serious

Than Acknowledged by the Government—The First Fatality.

Havana, March 17.—The outbreak reported from Vuelta, in Santa Clara province, has scored its first fatality.

Laavastida, a former captain of the Royal Guard, was shot and killed by the detachment of the Guards en route to arrest him. It is alleged that he made resistance.

Laavastida was reported last night officially as having been arrested at Placetas on the charge of complicity in the insurrectionary army movement. With this exception no news had been received here up to ten o'clock this morning.

The Government has information, but refuse to divulge it. It is rumored that the uprising is more serious than the authorities are willing to admit.

Secretary of Government Alberto and General Machado went to the palace this morning to confer with President Gomez. Later a cabinet meeting was called. President Gomez is in receipt of many telegrams from officials, veteran organizations and private citizens, pledging loyalty and active support in the maintenance of the republic.

A SURPRISED MINISTER.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from bronchial catarrh, and had despaired of anything like a cure. Judge of my pleasant surprise when I first used Hyomei, which brought complete relief. Hyomei has been a veritable godsend."—Rev. Charles Hartley, Sardinia, Ohio.

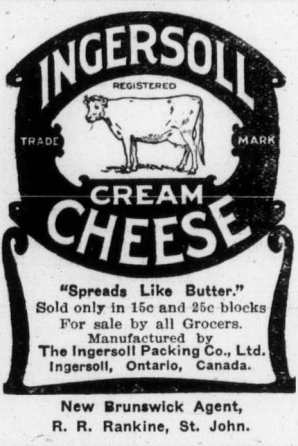

Thousands of catarrh sufferers have given up in despair. They have tried stomach dosing, snuff, sprays and douches without success, and now believe catarrh to be incurable.

But A. J. Ryan, the druggist, holds out hope to all distressed. He sells a remedy called Hyomei, which is guaranteed for catarrh, colds, coughs, bronchitis, asthma and croup.

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-mei) is medicated air, full of the healthy virtues of the mountain pines. You breathe in the delightful antiseptic air, and as it passes over the inflamed and germ ridden membrane it always the inflammation, kills the germs and drives out the disease.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including a hard rubber inhaler, costs but $1.00, and an extra bottle of Hyomei, if afterwards needed, costs but 50 cents. See A. J. Ryan about it to-day.

CHAMBERLAIN HAS HIS OWN TROUBLES

Held up by French Customs

Authorities and Fined Although He Had an Official Pass.

London, March 17.—"Rien," said the valet, shaking his head, when taken to declare, after the arrival of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and his party at Cannes—the other day whether the luggage contained any dutiable articles. The sequel, though disconcerting for the servant, had caused much amusement amongst the English visitors in the south of France who have heard of it.

Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, and the nurse, had driven at once from the station to the Villa Beatrice, leaving the valet to follow on with the luggage. The examination of this should presumably take a minute or two at the outside, as the British foreign office had supplied a special pass which had obviated the necessity of any examination at Calais or in Paris.

But the officials who collect the customs duties at Cannes declined to depart from their customary procedure and despite the pass and the valet's statement that there was nothing to declare, they insisted on opening the packages. One of the first was a portmanteau, and amongst the contents the searchers discovered a box of Mr. Chamberlain's favorite cigars.

Further inspection of other luggage disclosed more cigars and over 300 were brought to light. The valet explained that he did not pack the things and knew nothing of the cigars, which must have been put in by mistake, etc. The Customs officials were adamant; they could recognize no extenuating circumstances, and the law must take its course.

Accordingly, like any ordinary person, Mr. Chamberlain was fined 400 francs. This amount was subsequently reduced to 300 francs.

A falling fly nerve—no larger than the finest silken thread—takes from the heart its impulse, its power, its regularity. The Stomach also has its hidden or inside nerve. It was Dr. Shoop who first told us it was wrong to drug a weak or failing stomach, heart or kidneys. His prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed straight for the cause of these ailments—these weak and faltering inside nerves. This no doubt clearly explains why the Restorative has of late grown so rapidly in popularity. Druggists say that those who test the Restorative even for a few days soon become fully convinced of its wonderful power. Anyway, don't drug the organ. Treating the cause of sickness is the only sensible and successful way. Sold by all druggists.
