

the question

By STUART MOSCOE

A number of interest groups have asked for the Minister of Colleges and Universities Bette Stephenson's resignation over her proposed changes in the university education system. Do you think the Minister should resign?

Garry Wise, Osgoode III

"No. What we need is repudiation of the policies by the provincial government rather than the resignation of one particular Cabinet member."

Lidia Baldassarra, Geog I

"Yes. Someone does not have the right to tell others what they can or cannot study in university."

S. Stephenson, Grad Student

"Yes. I don't think she has addressed the full impact of the present reorganization of the secondary school system on the colleges and universities."

Mike Barton, Arts I

"No. I think she's doing a good job and besides, she deserves a chance to prove that her policies can work."

Avrum Rosensweig, Arts I

"No. I think that her proposals are so far only words that should be discussed with a committee of students and faculty as to their potential in helping universities to advance."

Neil Weinberg, Phys. Ed. I

"Yes. Unless she revises some of her proposals to satisfy the majority of students in university she should resign. Her proposals limit student education."

SIGHTSEEING GUIDES WANTED

Students need for part-time service as sightseeing bus tour guides all year round (peak season April to October). Good command of the English language mandatory, and preference will be given to those who speak a second language—particularly French, German, Spanish, Italian. Must have pleasing personality and appearance. Familiarity with Toronto and Ottawa helpful, but not essential (will train).
