

can no more row a boat straight towards your dock by pulling on one oar than you can make a just, happy, harmonious society by allowing the qualities and ends of one sex to dominate in all human institutions. Man alone has not made a success of society : woman alone would not make a success of it in the future. God made us male and female—alike in a vast number of human qualities, but different in some fundamental impulses, and it is only through an equal development of the male and female qualities and an equal expression of them in the institutions of society that we can hope to permanently improve life. The question of the hour is not merely giving woman a vote—that is a mere incident in social evolution—it is a question of giving woman an equal chance with man to become her true and whole self and of utilizing all her qualities in the creation and regulation of the institutions within which all people, male and female, must alike live.
