[From Father Ryan's Poems.]

I saw his face to-day. He looks like a chief,
Who fears not human rage or human guile,
Upon his checks the twilight of a grief,
But in that grief the starlight of a smile,
Deep, gentle eyes, with drooping lids, that

They are the homes where tears of sorrow dwelf.

A low voice, strangely sweet, whose very tone. tone tone the sellps oft speak with God alone, I kissed his hand—I fain would kiss his feet—"No, no," he said, and in accents sweet: Then took me by the hand, the while he smilled. And, going, whispered, "Pray for me my child!"

MOTHER BOUDREAU'S DEATH. THE END OF A LONG AND BUSY LIFE OF RELIGIOUS USEFULNESS

Mother Boudreau, for twenty-six years a controlling mind in the affairs of the Convent of the Sacred Heart, in Manhattanville, a woman honored with the approval of the late Pius IX. with the higher offices of the order of the Ladies of the Sacred Heart, died at a seat of the order in Turaru, New Zealand, on the 12th ult. The tidings of her death did not reach the United States until Thursday. The death of Mme. Boudreau will day. The death of Mme. Boudreau will be mourned in every section of the United States, and in South America and Cuba, for pupils came from every quarter of the New World to receive a secular education and religious inspiration under her teaching. It is computed that the young women who received her instruction number of the secular education and the secular groups than being wemen who received her instruction num-ber many thousands, among them being many ladies conspicuous in the society of this and other cities. The Convent of the Sacred Heart under her guidance acquired a national fame. A friend familiar with her life gives the following facts: "Mme. Boudreau was born in New Orleans, in 1823. Her parents were of French extraction, though natives of Louisiana. They were most fervid Catholics, and their children were reared in ac-cordance with the tenets of the Catholic cordance with the tenets of the Catholic Church. A brother and several cousins of Mme. Bourdreau are now members of religious orders. Her brother, Father Boudreau, is a member of the Society of Jesus, and is noted for his success as a missionary in the West. He has also more than local fame as a skillut chemist.

Mrs. Boudreau, was notable even in the trying these men in their own county. The Toronto Thunderer forgets that it impeaches the whole County of Middlesex, it forgets that none can better judge whether a homicide is justifiable than Mme. Boudreau was notable even in her pious family, for devotions to her reli-gion. She was untiring from her earliest years in her scrupulous compliance with all of its requirements. As she grew older, she spoke frequently of her desire to become one of a religious order. Her parents were not displeased with this disposition, and when, soon after she re-ceived her first communion and was confirmed, she declared her purpose of offering herself as a candidate for admission to the order of the Sacred Heart, they did the order of the Sacred Heart, they did not oppose her. They urged her to give further thought to the subject, and she delayed the execution of her purpose until the fifteenth year. Then she ap-plied to the ladies of the foundation of the order near her birthplace, and they accepted her as a novice. In the order of the Sacred Heart the novitiate is longer and more trying, probably, than in any other. It lasts for seven years. In this period the defects of previous education are supplemented and faults of character orrected. If the novice prove in-ble, she is dismissed, But if she is satisfactory in every respect to her watch ful superiors during this probation, she is permitted to take the perpetual vow, and assume the sable habit of the order. Mme. Boudreau passed through the pro-bationary period creditably, and was albationary period creditably, and was allowed to make the religions profession in her twenty-second year. Soon afterward she was selected as a valuable assistant to Mme. Hardy in the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Manhattanville. As soon as her these impromptulies, and, in fact, has a publications had been tested fully, she deart in Manhattanville. As soon as her qualifications had been tested fully, she was given the executive management of the pupils, with the rank of Mistress-General. For twenty-three years she general. For twenty-three years she contains the same of the pupils, with the rank of Mistress-definition of the pupils with the rank of Mistress-definition of the pupils with the same of the pupils and produce the prisoners cannot produce filled this trying office in a way to reflect honor upon the order everywhere. Then she was promoted to the place of Local Superior. In the three years of her incumbency the duties of the office were performed with vigor. In 1871 it was decided in a council of the order that her great experience and acquirements were needed in a comparatively new field, Eden Hall, near Philadelphia. Until 1874 she s Local Superior there. Her success in s charge won a new promotion for her, that of Superior Vicar. She was directed to proceed to the Southern province of the order. She went South without delay, the order in Graud Coteau, St. Landry parish, Louisiana. From this central point she exercised control over many Superiors. In 1876 it was deemed for the good of the order to transfer her to the Western province. She settled in St. Louis, the centre of the local superiorates under her authority. The direction of this important trust was most satisfactory to her spiritual superiors, and the religieuse in her keeping. As a Superior Vicar she was called upon to take part in the periodical councils of the order, and this duty, it is said, she performed with exceptional discretion. In December last she was selected to conduct a calculus a calculus to the order to Turaru. New duct a colony of the order to Turaru, New Realand. The preparations were quickly made, and Mme. Boudreau, though advanced in years, and bearing traces of her toilsome life, set out at the head of her devoted little band. Positive information as to the cause of her death has not yet reached the United States, but little doubt is entertained among the ladies of the order here that she succumbed to her religion from her toilsome In the afternoon the ladies re-been long ago prodicted for him.

THE BIDDULPH AFFAIR. A COMMON-SENSE LETTER EROM

The following letter appeared in the lamilton Spectator a few days since:—Sir,—It would seem the Globe has a mis-Sir,—It would seem the Globe has a mission to kunt down the men in prison charged with the murder of the Donnelleys. Yesterday a letter appeared in its columns which, to say the least of it, was very thin, and only too well exposed the Globe's self-imposed mission. Seldom in the annals of newspaper history have we seen a paper taking such an important position in reference to any outrage against position in reference to any outrage against the laws as has the Globe in this case; and the vehemence with which it demands a change of venue is of a very suspicious character. When any community ceases to be able to protect itself by law against robbery, murder and rapine, and reckless destruction of property, the most natural thing in the world is for that community to organize and use such means as will rid itself of the spoilers and murderers. The train of circumstances in Biddulph that led to the late homicides has no parallel in the history of Canada. Even by the Globe's own showing men were robbed in broad daylight, and threatened with immediate daying and directed with immediate death if they dared to inform; their horses and cattle were disembowelled and ham strung; their barns and houses were burned; their crops were let rot in the field for fear of the Donnellys; and forsooth this train of villainy, this train of outrage, this train of bloodshed, train of outrage, this train of bloodshed, must continue because these outlaws could so conduct their scoundrelisms as to defeat the ends of justice. For years these people have been lying on beds of torture, expecting night after night they would be burned up in their houses; for years the Donnellys have been the terror of the country as well as the Roman Line, and now the Globe will have it that the ends of justice cannot be served by trying these men in their own county. it forgets that none can better judge whether a homicide is justifiable than whether a homicide is justifiable than those who personally know the facts and circumstances, and that argument must be specially weak and specious that would make it appear that a whole county is so debased, that, in fact, a whole community of counties are so utterly lost to right and justice that no honest verdict can in this case be had near the scene of bloodshed. Why does the Globe produce so many arguments in re change of venue? Why does it try to carry the trial hundreds of miles away? In all this there is a tacit admission of the old proverb "Vox populi, vox dei;" and were the whole matter not serious it would be amusing to view the unwonted anxiety of the Thunderer in unworted anxiety of the Thunderer in taking exception to such a decision. In all this I fear there is the trail of a political serpent only too apparent, the ends of which even the Toronto Thunderer would shrink from owning. No doubt the Globe will rise in virtuous indignation and deny and travel the charge but will health done. repel the charge, but will hardly deny that it, with all its virtue and sense of justice, h s taken under its wing one of the worst felons that ever disgraced Western Canada. "Take him up tenderly, touch him with care," has been its motto, while all its virtuous indignation and fiery invective have been hurled at the accused. It has eulogized the straightforward evidence of the boy Connors, who, in the character the prisoners cannot pre evidence in rebuttal, that it would be dangerous for the defendants to show their hand, and, forsooth, it plaintively shouts "Guilty! Guilty!" perhaps not in so many words, but with an intent that none can doubt. Is it true that the Globe is in this case fighting a party battle? It can hardly be hoped to get a reply from the Thunderer that can be depended upon, but others might investigate and unearth the cause of this bitter animus, and this process of hounding down men who, as a last resort—as per Globe—did enact a tragedy that has shocked Canada, but under a pressure and temptation that might have carried cooler heads with so strong a current, when law by its lax administration had only too certainly proved powerless to save their lives, their homes and their property from the incendiary and the dagger of the midnight assassin.

STRANGE STORY.

AN INDIAN IN WALKERTON JAIL CHARGED WITH THREE MURDERS.

Dave Ritchie, an Indian well known in the County of Bruce, is at present in the Walkerton jail for threatening to shoot a man. This has encouraged a friend of man. This has encouraged a friend of his to give the following startling revelation:

In the year 1876 a quantity of lumber came ashore on the Peninsula of Bruce, and Ritchie took possession of the same, which, however, was stelen during the congregation. which, however, was stolen during his absence. In the same place shortly afterwards, in company with this friend, three Indians were seen approaching the land in a boat. Ritchie declared these which does not include the $1,000 granted but wards, in company with this friend, three of the order here that she succumbed to the hardships of the long journey.

The Right Rev. Bishop Redwood, of New Zealand, sent information of Mme. Bondreau's death to the Superior-General of the order in Paris, and letters were addressed by the Superior-General to the convents of the order in this city and St. Louis. On the morning of the day on which they were received in St. Louis the ladies of the convent got letters from Mine. Bondreau, mailed just before her death. She spoke of her feeble state, but was full of glowing anticipations of the gain to her religion from her toilsome mission. In the afternoon the ladies received the Superior-General's announcement of Mme. Boudreau's death. It has not been decided yet whether her remains are to be broult to the United States for interment. It is deemed somewhat improbable, however, that they will be, for harm markets inter the remains of

ST. PATRICK'S DAY IN BRANTFORD.

From the Expositor 18th As per announcement, a musical and literary entertainment was given in St. Basil's school hall last evening, which showed by the number in attendance, that the sons of Erin in Brantford have not forgotten how to honor the remembrance of the Patron Saint of Ireland.

formed some choice music.

A solo and chorus, by Messrs. F. Lent, J. Byrne and T. H. Lannon, "There's no one to welcome me home," was well rendered, after which the chairman,
Mr. D. O'Conner, introduced Mr. J.
McKenna, who spoke on the "Defence of the Laws of Ireland," and in summing up said that those who advocate land tenure in Ireland might as well advocate a railroad to the moon, one would help a railroad to the moon, one would help as much as the other.

A solo, "I wondered by the Brookside," by Mr. J. Maxwell, was followed by "The advocacy of alterations in the laws that govern Ireland," by Mr. Jas. H. Dignan, in a most logical style of reasoning. He sat down amid thunders of applause. A duet, "Larboard Watch," by Messrs.

Lannon and W. Cantillon, representing H. M. Ships Parliament and Pinafore, was well "Irish Emigration" was next delt with "Irish Emigration" was next delt with by Mr. R. Sinon, in a manner which showed careful thought and study of his subject. He decidedly favored the emigration of his countrymen to this country.

Mr. J. Byrne then sang in good voice "Killarney," which was loudly encored, and in response sang "Mollie Dear, Come Along With Me."

Mr. Le Bran on "Home Rule" was the

Mr. Jno. Ryan, on "Home Rule" was the next on the programme. He thought that Home Rule embraced the land reform scheme, and speaking of the idea vaunted by some, that "Irishmen" were unable to govern themselves, he referred to the posi-tions Irishmen have attained to in other countries, as a mark of their ability, and qualification to rule, and after lengthened remarks took his seat amid loud applause.

Duet "Army and Navy" were sung by Messrs. J. Maxwell and T. H. Lannon. The chairman after a few remarks in summing up, introduced James Gorden Bennett of the New York Herald, who had accidentally laid over in Brantford, and who upon entering into a speech, was in-terrupted by Chas. Stewart Parnell, and the Texan method of discusing followed, revolvers glistening in the gaslight, causing a good deal of amusement.

A solo, "Cruiskeen Lawn," by Mr. W. Cantillon, was well given, Messrs. Lan-non and Maxwell assisting in the chorus. Mr. T. H. Lannon then sang "The

Mr. 1. H. Lannon then sang "The Brave Old Oak" in good style.

Miss McKenna presided at the organ with her usual ability, assisting materially in adding to the pleasure of the hour.

Rev. Father Madigan, of Walkerton, who eulogized the previous speeches, and com-plimented the young gentlemen who so well acquitted themselves, and referred to the introduction of J. G. ## HORSE-WHIPPED. THE RESULT OF INSULTING A LADY. From the Advertiser, March 23.

An Ingersoll correspondent writes under date of Saturday: A very unusual oc-currence took place on the main street in front of the post office on Saturday fore-noon. It is alleged that A. G. Murray had used insulting language to one of Inger-soll's fairest daughters. The young lady's friends were naturally very much incensed. friends were naturally very much incensed. Her father at once purchased a horse whip, not knowing that a young gentleman had already prepared himself to administer a dose of the lash. Murray was accosted by the young man, and charged with having used language unbecomming a gentleman, which he acknowledged, but questioned the young man's right to interfere. The result was, a fair and souare horse-whitpping took place a fair and square horse-whipping took place in the presence of a large crowd, who were highly amused. Murray took the castigation with becoming meekness. The mos amusing part of the affair is that Murray The most amusing part of the affair is that Murray is a six-footer, carrying his breadth with his length, and the young gentleman is about half his weight. The Police Magistrate, knowing well the character of the parties concerned, imposed a merely nominal fine of $1.25 and costs. A purse has been made up to pay all expenses, which amounts to ten times what is required. As there are several other matters that Murray is said to have had a hand in lately, the fund will be kept until it is wanted. Many express regret that Murray's head was not as much abused as his hat. This

THE CHURCH IN SCOTLAND.

The Archbishop of Glasgow in his Lenten Pastoral speaks as follows of the condition of the Church in Scotland: "We are able to give you, with more precision than at any previous date, the number of the faithful in Scotland and in our archthe faithful in Scotland and in our arch-diocese. From the last printed official list of the baptisms, the total number was 14,065, and those for Glasgow archdiocese were 9079. By multiplying these figures by 22—certainly a low factor—we find the Catho-lies of Scotland to be 309,430, and those of the archdiocese to be 199.738 from of the archdiocese to be 199,738, from which figures we find that the baptisms of this archdioceses are 4093 above the totals of the other dioceses, and that the Catholic population of 199,738 is 90,046 above the totals of the other dioceses. For a population of about two-thirds of the whole we have but 59 missions, 121 priests, 116 departments of mission schools, 7 middle-class schools, 3 in-dustrial schools, 2 reformatory schools, 2 orphanage schools, and 1 seminary; whilst the churches and chapels are 78 in number.
