

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

JULY 31, 1881.

MOSES AND THE MAGICIANS.—Exodus 7: 1-17.

1. "I have made thee a God to Pharaoh, I, e., as a god. The expression is used figuratively, and is intended to show Moses that Pharaoh should be brought to recognize the superhuman character of the powers with which he was endowed for the purpose of his mission. He is also told that Aaron shall be his prophet, this word being used in the sense of authoritative spokesman and interpreter. It is probable that Aaron was the speaker throughout all the ensuing transactions, even when not mentioned.

"I will harden Pharaoh's heart."—This declaration must be explained by the well-known principle of Hebrew phraseology, according to which a person is said to do that which some other person does, or that which some other person is about to do, or the occasion of other action of the Lord did not harden Pharaoh's heart by any direct influence which he exerted upon it, nor of set purpose; but he knew that such a would be the effect of Moses' appeals to him on behalf of the Israelites. His heart was so under the influence of every bad passion already, and he was so determined to act in defiance of God, that every step taken towards liberating the Israelite, would tend to make him harder and harder, till God should arise in his wrath, and subdue his obduracy by one final crushing blow. The fact, therefore, is that Pharaoh hardened his own heart.

What was true of Pharaoh is true of others. Our hearts are naturally hard and evil; but when God speaks to us, and shows us his signs and wonders, we harden them still more. Even the goodness and forbearance of God sometimes have a hardening effect.

2. The first miracles which Moses was instructed to work, were not plagues. It was not till Pharaoh's obstinacy compelled such a course that supernatural acts of a punitive character were performed. The miracle of turning the rod into a serpent, and the serpent back into a rod, had been first wrought to assure Moses himself; then it was made the sign of his authority to the Israelites; and now to Pharaoh. Serpent charming was then a now much practiced in Egypt and other Eastern countries by neomancers; and thus the magicians whom Pharaoh summoned to his aid found no difficulty in imitating the act of Moses. But the swallowing up of their serpents by the rod of Aaron was a marvel they were not prepared for. It was a great triumph for Moses and Aaron, and must have produced a powerful impression.

Pharaoh's heart, however, was hardened, and then the series of plagues began with which all are familiar. The great and direct design of these plagues has been already referred to, and is sufficiently obvious. But there were, no doubt, other purposes served by them which the Lord had also in view in their affliction. It is to be noted that they all had reference to some object of idolatrous worship amongst the Egyptians, and were designed to produce on the minds of the Egyptians and Israelites a salutary impression of the impotency of the gods in which the Egyptians trusted.

3. There are two theories about the imitations of the miracles of Moses which the magicians of Pharaoh were able to produce. The first, and very generally adopted one, is that they were very clever tricks, such as are all commonly practiced by conjurers. It may have been so. The jugglers of India are said to do things even more wonderful. It is evident that time was given them for all necessary preparations for imposing upon the spectators, who were interested parties anxious for their success, and, therefore, the more easily deceived.

The other theory is that which may be expressed by the word demonology. It is that—as this was a contest between the true God and false deities, which, whatever form they assumed, were, in reality, embodiments of devilship—the powers of darkness lent their assistance to the Egyptian magicians. There is nothing improbable in this. The contest was one in which Satan was likely to put forth all his powers on behalf of his servants. But these powers, great as they may be, are strictly limited, and the point was soon reached at which the magicians, defeated and defeated, retired from the scene.

It should be noted that though the miracles of Moses were of the nature of the magicians of the Egyptians, the magicians did not endeavor to reproduce them. One would have thought that the most natural course for them to take if they possessed the powers which they claimed. But they only attempted a poor imitation of what Moses had done. If they had succeeded in making the bloody waters pure, or in turning the land of frogs, they would have accomplished something in behalf of their gods and their king. But they could only produce a counterfeit of the miracle which Moses had wrought. When, under the third plague, lice swarmed on every person and thing, so that it was impossible to find a space for their operations, they could only confess their defeat, and acknowledge the finger of God.—Continued from Sunday School Magazine

KEEPING CHILDREN AFTER SCHOOL.

There is one common practice of the public schools which ought to be abolished at once and everywhere without question or parley. This is the practice of imprisoning the children in the school houses beyond the school hours.

Pretty nearly every school-house in the land is thus turned into a penitentiary in which children are immured every day, some of them for imperfect recitations, others for faults of deportment. This method of punishment might, if the teachers, were all judicious, be resorted to occasionally with good effect; but teachers are not all judicious, and thousands of children are thus detained every day, to whom the detention is a serious injury, and a grave injustice. For a mere trifling breach of order, like turning in the seat or dropping a pencil, for some small failure in a recitation, and often for no fault at all—whole classes being kept on account of the indifference of some of their members and the innocent thus suffering with the guilty—the children are shut up in the school-house, sometimes during the intermission, often after the close of school. Thousands of children in delicate health, to whom the regular school hours are too long, are permanently injured by this system of confinement. If only the stupid and the wilful and those in sturdy health were thus punished there would be less reason of complaint, but any careful examination will show that such a punishment is not generally made, and from the nature of the system, cannot well be made; and that the injury to the health of pupils is a subject to which the average school teacher gives but little consideration; any practice, therefore, which is liable to result in the impairment of the pupils' health ought to be forbidden by law.

This plea is based upon an observation of the working of this system in several towns and cities and upon the concurrent testimony of many medical men. In some places the rules of the governing boards forbid the imprisonment of children, but the rules are generally set at naught by teachers. They ought to be enforced. It must be that there are methods of discipline for schools less injurious and more effective than imprisonment.—Good Company.

WIRE FENCES. We have never been very favorably impressed with any kind of wire fence, but we are free to confess that along the banks of rivers and streams that are liable to overflow and wash away board fences the wire fence is certainly, in the long run, the cheapest, as there is but little danger of any loss from high water to a wire fence. Thousands of dollars' worth of fencing were carried away this winter in this State which less would not have occurred if wire fences had been in the place of board; therefore we would advise the use of wire in replacing or rebuilding fences. Three wires, with a board at the top, or a pole, or, if you choose, at the bottom. It is always best to have something aside from wire to show stock, where the fence is.

USEFUL HINTS. In choosing vases select delicate white or some neutral tint, no gaudy color, for the flowers should be the point of color, not the vase. Red clover when sown by itself, or with orchard grass, should be cut as soon as the bloom begins to fade. If the meadow is clover and timothy it will be necessary to defer cutting ten days. When fattening an animal for beef, let the process be as quick as possible. Any stint in feeding will make the meat tough and dry. Stall-fed animals will fatten more readily than others, and younger ones require richer food than older ones. Some gentlemen in London went to see the generator of the electric light. They were told to put aside their watches before they approached too near. This it seems was necessary, as otherwise the steel in the watches would have become polarized, and the watches spoilt.

Fences are probably a greater tax on the farmer than is generally suspected. If a farm of 160 acres is divided into ten acre fields it contains about five miles of fences; and if the fence rows are one rod wide no less than ten acres, or six and a fourth per cent of the whole farm, is occupied by fences. These ten acres generally form the nursery for weeds, which is amply sufficient to stock the whole farm with that commodity. Do not let the cows suffer for want of water during this hot weather. When once a cow is partially dried up it is hard to bring her into a full flow of milk again. Do not allow your cows to be overbeated by fast driving, and if you want plenty of milk and butter, feed them enough so that when the heat advances they may lie down in the shade and not be compelled by hunger to work hard in a short pasture. In cutting flowers for bouquets have a tin basin having water in it. Cut your flowers—never break or pull them; it bruises the stems and hastens decay. Stand your flowers up in the dish, and put all of one color together carefully; then, when ready to begin combining, you can readily see what you have to work with, and make your selection without tumbling them over. The water prevents them from wilting. Flowers picked on a warm summer morning and carried closely in the hand while in being will be so wilted that they will take a long time to revive.

"PULMONARY CONSUMPTION arises from a decline or d-ficiency of vitality in the natural bioplasm, or germinal matter, and this d-ficiency manifests itself not only in a general wasting or atrophy of the whole body, but also in a peculiar degradation, chiefly in the lungs and lymphatic system, of portions of the bioplasm into a sluggish, as-lived, yet proliferating matter, which instead of maintaining the nutrition and integrity of the tissues (which is the natural office of bioplasm) clogs them, and irritates them with a substance which is more or less prone to decay, and eventually involves them also in its own disintegration and destruction." To remedy this deficiency by sustaining the vitality of the bioplasm, and thus provide for the general building up of the whole system, is the office and design of Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphite of Lime. Prepared solely by Hannington Bros. Pharmaceutical Chemists, St. John, N.B., and for sale by Druggists and General Dealers. Price $1.00 per bottle; six bottles for $5.00. June 24 1st

SPRAINS. I had my ankle sprained so severely that I was obliged to use crutches for four days before trying Graham's Pain Eradicator. Having proved its efficiency I have since then, eight years ago, kept it constantly in my house, and always found it to be a valuable and I think the best family medicine in use. Charles E. Bishop, Port Williams N. S. May 10, 1881.

AFTER AN ATTACK OF FEVER. MEASLES Diphtheria, or any wasting disease, HANINGTON'S QUININE WINE AND IRON is the best medicine to take. It gives lasting strength. NO LADY WHO DELIGHTS IN FLOWERS, and likes to see them do well and bloom abundantly, should be without Hannington's Food for Flowers. Ordinary packages 30c.—sufficient for 20 plants for one year. A SIMPLE CURE FOR INDIGESTION. The worst cases of indigestion can be permanently cured by taking Hannington's Sugar Coated Dinner Pills according to directions. They seldom fail. July 1. 1m.

INFORMATION.

FOWLS.—If growers of poultry would increase the value of their stock twenty per cent, whether in weight, quality or eggs, they have but to use the well-known Condition Powders occasionally with the feed of the fowls. The experiment is worth trying! Druggists and grocers sell them.

It is remarkable that the active ingredients of Fellows' Hypoposrites are alkaloids from trees which attain to very great ages, taken in connection with the fact that this preparation will increase the longevity of the human family is a somewhat singular coincidence.

The blood at times becomes loaded with impurities and moves thick and sluggishly in the veins. This condition of the vital fluid cannot last long without serious results. An alternative is needed to purify the blood and impart energy to the system, and there is none better than Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

For Sprains and Bruises.—Rub Perry Davis' Pain Killer well into the wounded parts, taking the medicine internally at the same time.

HOW WISTER'S BALSAM CURES. From S. S. Moore, Practitioner, M. D., of Hermon, N. Y. "Wister's Balsam of Wild Cherry gives universal satisfaction. It seems to cure a cough by loosening and cleansing the lungs, and allaying irritation, thus removing the cause, instead of drying up the cough and leaving the cause behind. I consider the Balsam the best cough medicine with which I am acquainted." 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.
