Text of the Lesson, Acts xxvi, 1, 24-32 . S. Graham 1.00 Memory Verses, 28, 29-Golden Text, Acts xxvi, 19-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

With the king and queen and all Hamilton 1.00 their pompous retinue, and the chief 1. Adams 1.00 captains and principal men of the city (xxv, 23), this was probably one of Booth 1.00 Paul's greatest opportunities to tell to 50 earth's great ones the wondrous story able to find that he had committed anything worthy of death, but that having appealed to Caesar, he was going to send him to Rome, though he could not signify any crime that he had been guilty of, but he hoped that after Agrippa had heard him and examined him he might have something definite in write. The king, having given Paul permis sion to speak for himself, he began by 28.28 saying that he was happy to be per mitted to state his case before the $578.75 king because he knew him to be ex pert in all customs and questions among the Jews. He therefore asked to be heard patiently (verses 1-3) With a word concerning his early life at Jerusalem and his being brought up .50: a Pharisee and well known to all the Jews, he said that the accusation 2.50 against him was that he had become a

He then confessed that, like the Jews who were 50.00 aw persecuting him, he had himself been also a persecutor of the followers of Jesus of Nazareth, under the au thority of the chief priests and a very cruel one, even going to distant cities to arrest them (verses 9-11). mission up to that day (verses 12-23).

We may be sure that such an assem blage never heard such a testimony be fore, and we can only hope that some of those who heard became followers of Jesus as Pauf prayed that they might (verse 29). Festus certainly heard more about the "One Jesus" (xxv, 19) than he knew before, but he had no use for much talk and told Paul 1.75 had no use for such talk and told Paul that he was mad and beside himself $578.75 (verse 24). It was not pleasant to be told so publicly, but this also was fel lowship with the Lord Jesus, for they said of Him. "He hath a devil and is still of the same mind.

It is possible that some in the assem bly thought Paul to be more sane than Pestus, and it looks as if the king was inclined to that opinion (verse 28). The revised version reads, "With but little persuasion thou would'st fain make me a Christian," and Paul's heart went out to God in great desire, that not only Agrippa, but all who heard him speak, might become Christians, or, as he put it, "almost and altogether such as I am, except these bonds" (verse 29). The king and governor and others having gone aside to consult, their decision was that Paul had done nothing worthy of death or of bonds, and that if he had not appealed unto Caesar he 3.60 if he had not appealed unto Caesar he 7.25 might have been set at liberty (verses 7.25 might have been set at liberty (verses 1.35 30-32). She was to open his letters while he was gone, attend to any thing needing attention so far as she was able and communicate any matter of which he should be advised. This was asking a good deal, considering that he kept his affairs so rigidly to himself. He had not been long away efore a letter came for him bearing cial mark of the governor of the state. Susan opened it and read:

Dear John—I'm going to run down to see you tomorrow. My purpose is to get away from under the harrow for a brief season. I shall eschew all affairs of state except the canai matter, on which I wish to confer with you; but, that off my mind, I propose to take a rest. Yours,

The governor of the state was altogether too big a man for her to entertain during her father's absence What should she do? Telegraph, of course, that her brother would be out of town. Why not telephone? The state capital was not far distant, and the expense would be about the same. It was 11 o'clock in the morning, and the governor would doubtless be in his office. Going to the telephone booth, she consulted the subscribers' names and, finding the governor's number took down the receiver and called for him. He was sitting at his desk at the time and answered the call at once. "Is this Governor Martindale?" asked

"Yes. I'm Martindale" "I am John Atwater's sister. My asked me to open any lefters that uight come for him. One came from you stating that you were coming to see him. I thought it advisable to telephone you that he is absent."

Of all the months in the year the Of all the months in the year the month of June is the most delicious, and the morning after Susie Atwater had headed off the governor was one of the brightest mornings of that bright month. Susie Atwater, having anished her morning duties, was sitting on the porch with some embroidery work when she saw a man approaching, dressed in a white fiannel suit and a straw hat. He looked to be about thirty-five years old, and be about thirty-five years old, and there was something altogether very attractive in his appearance. He stop-ped at the foot of the steps and asked:

Being shown to the booth, the gentleman called up John Atwater and caught him at his hotel at the noon neal. After a brief conversation the guest told Susie that her brother wished to speak a few words with her, and on taking the receiver she was instructed to send to the inn for the gentleman's baggage and if possible keep him till he (John) returned.

"Who is he?" asked Susie.

"A college classmate of mine."
With this there was a click, and Susie was shut off from any further in-formation. Without a word to the visitor she sent for his baggage, and it arrived in time for him to dress for dinner. Notwithstanding he had reach-ed middle age he seemed very boyish. He talked a great deal about the escapades he and John were concerned in while in college, though he said that John was rather old for that sort of thing. Susie wondered how John's friend could have had time for escapades, for a Phi Beta Kappa key hung to his fob, and Susie knew that that meant a high stand in his class. However, he gave her the impression of being very bright, and it might be that he had been one of those students who can maintain a good standing with no great amount of study.

Everyone in Canada knows of the heroism of the various Canadian troops in Europe, and of the generous donation in the shape of grain, etc., but little mention is made of the thousands of loyal Canadians who have traveled to England at their own expense, and have there enlisted is every branch of the service. Even here in the campaign in British East Africa, they are well represented. Susie Atwater was desirous of obtaining the guest's name, but hesitated to ask him point blank. Finally she mustered up courage to do so.

"I have a proposition to make," he replied. "When your brother returns he and I will be John and Bob to each other. You and he will be John and Sue. That leaves you and me out in the cold for Miss and Mister. What do you say to our being Bob and Susie till John comes home?"

"So I see."

John grasped his friend's hand; then, turning to his sister, he said:

"Sue, this is my college friend, Bob Martindale, better known to the public today as James Robert Martindale, governor of this state. I'm glad you succeeded in keeping him until my return."
