When the daybreaks come men are too lazy to make use of the pieces.

Girls, who try the hardest to get married, usually die old maids.

There was never any doubt about the popularity of Band Concerts in the Park.

The net of justice catches many queer fish, but the queerest yet taken was Stoddard.

Mayor Sulman is going to take the Council to church on Coronation Day. Even a Coronation can do some good.

Perhaps Laureate Austin is waiting for Kipling to fire first. But his peace ode should be due by this time.

A bridge fell the other day, killing six men. The Globe's telegraph reports had it "collapse of a bridge killed six men."

It is now the baseball clubs who play with Pete McAulay's fast aggregation, who have occasion to "regret to report."

The chairman of the Industrial Committee objects to any members of his committee buttoning in when there is any business for the committee to transact.

There is evidently something Irish about that artist who decorated the blackboard at the post office yesterday—"Rain or shine, moonlight excursion to-night."

Mark Twain has again retired forever from the public platform. This recalls the stories we used to hear about the Southern African war being ended. They came periodically.

This proposal to revive the custom of kissing the ladies' hands will be met with the fierce opposition of a few of us who prefer to kiss the ladies' lips.

I intend to wait to do my rejoicing over the declaration of peace, until I find out just how many of those pacified warriors intend mounting the lecture platform.

I have so far failed to observe the New York newspapers turning handsprings over the fact that England defeated America at polo. All they can remember is the yacht races.

When those Hamilton guys get tired listening to the tale of woe of old dub, unducky numbered band, they can come up to Chatham some Wednesday night and hear real music from a real band.

The other day I called a Planet reporter a sponge that absorbed news and didn't give it out until squeezed in The Planet press. All The Planet reporters object to the term. They say they never sponge.

Captain of Lacroix Street Sluggers—Well, we've only been beaten four times this year, anyway.

Booster for the Braves—How many games have you played?

Captain of Lacroix Street Sluggers—Four.

Vital Goudreau says that he hasn't been nearly as successful as usual in his fishing. He lays his want of success to the fact that he hasn't done much advertising this year. All of which goes to show that advertising in this G. H. J. pays.

A full account of the elaborate presentation by the employees of the Hamilton News to the equestrian of their staff on the eve of his painful departure to wider spheres and greater influence, is unavoidably crowded out of the columns of this G. H. J. today.

The evils of using tobacco are again apparent. The St. Thomas Times tells of a man who died in Watertown, Mass., at the age of 112 years, and had used the weed for over 100 years. The old fellow evidently made a vigorous fight, but it fetched him at last.

It may be only a coincidence, but the country will view with suspicion the fact that the price of wheat reduced in St. Louis just about the time that the South African peace destroyed the demand for live Missouri mules.

"You doubtless mean a bucket of fresh water," corrected the professor. "I wish you would pay some little attention to your rhetoric."

Anxious thoughts sometimes perplex the wife who sees maternity before her. If she is treading an untried path, she sometimes frets herself into a nervous condition which is injurious and prostrating. If motherhood has already been a painful experience she is apt to shrink from the coming trial and by her very mental anxiety increase the possibility of her suffering.

There is no cause for anxiety for those prospective mothers who use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite, induces refreshing sleep and produces mental cheerfulness as well as physical vigor. It gives strength and muscular elasticity so that the baby's advent is practically painless. It is the best tonic for nursing mothers.

"I am so thankful for what Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has done for me," writes Mrs. John F. Smith, of Sioux, Brit. Col. Box 50. "It helped me through the long months before baby came and I have the strong baby girl, the most healthy of the three, and it cured me of a disease which was taking away all my strength."

The dealer who offers a substitute for "Favorite Prescription" does so to gain the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines. His profit is your loss, therefore accept no substitute.

Mr. Kruger says if he returns to the Transvaal it will be in a Holland vessel. So? Nothing to do with those black, square-faced Holland vessels that I've heard about, I hope.

UP TO THE JURY.

A western judge charged a jury as follows: "Gentlemen of the jury, if you believe what the attorney for the defence has said, you will bring in a verdict for the defendants; or if you believe what the attorney for the plaintiff has said, you will bring in a verdict for the plaintiff; but, if, like me, you do not believe what either of them has said, I do not know what the devil you will do."

A Bank on Wheels.

ONE of the most brilliant ideas of modern times has just occurred to the local authorities which administer the public moneys of the town of Meziere, in the Ardennes. The new scheme consists in an "automobile savings bank." The term requires some explanation.

The inventors apply it to a new sort of motor car which they are having built. The vehicle is propelled by electricity and contains four seats, one in front and apart from the others, for the driver. The three places behind are arranged round a revolving table in the middle of the car, one at each side and one at the rear of the vehicle. Writing desks are fitted over each of the three seats and devised in such a way that they can be either folded flat against the sides of the carriage inwardly or opened outwardly. The central table also contains desks, besides bookshelves and a small metallic strong-box. Such is the new automobile. The use to which the authorities of Meziere intend to put their invention is as follows:

The car will travel round the country, making stoppages of an hour or so on prearranged days in the different localities of the department. The passengers will be two clerks of the local treasury administration and a cashier. They will carry with them a complete collection of savings bank books, registers and forms, and the third of the above-mentioned officials will be empowered to receive moneys. Your readers will have now divined the purpose of the financial authorities of Meziere. It seems that these gentlemen, assembled in council lately, came to the conclusion that something should be done to encourage thrift among the peasantry of the Ardennes. On the other hand, it was recognized that the saving propensity was already very marked among the country folk. What was needed was that the administration should meet their wants halfway. The peasants put by their earnings thriftily enough, but frequently fail to invest them in savings banks because, especially in the busy summer months, they have little time for journeying to the few principal towns where the offices are situated. So the authorities determined upon sending the savings bank to the country folk instead of waiting any longer for them to find time to come to the office.

The description of the vehicle which the authorities have had built, according to their own design, requires further explanation except to say that the movable desks are intended for use by the public, hence the arrangement by which they can be opened outward over the road. It is in this arrangement that the picture of the unqualified approval of the savings bank clerks, whose days hitherto throughout the fine season have been spent in the offices. But, contrary to what might have been expected, the public does not look upon the innovation with unalloyed delight. Some suspicious persons have spread a rumor that the administrative motor car will not always convey savings bank clerks, but will occasionally bring—more often, perhaps, than would be desirable—unwelcome visitors, the tax collector.

The Phraseology of Sport.

THE London "Outlook," in a recent number, while conceding that every sport and pastime should, naturally, have an especial phraseology, deplored the fact that this phraseology is becoming mere jargon. In its "palmy days" the P.R. could boast a language of its own; and one regret to notice in the picturesque reporter is now doing the same disservice to cricket. When an eleven makes a bad start it is suffering from "rot and rot." One batsman is "breezy," another plays with "graceful assurance," a third is "cheaply dismissed." A score that progresses unevenly is "streaky," and a very favorite form for the batsman and-do "played excellent cricket." This might reasonably be expected on a cricket field, where Bridge or Pong-pong would be somewhat out of place.

After all, however, it is the dullard reporter who most savagely dislocates the vertebrae of the King's English. Not long ago one of the brotherhood varied the monotony of the play by describing the red ball as a "pink" run.

After all, the most glaring examples of idiotic phraseology in the English papers are exceedingly tame, besides those of our own, says the "Bookman." For instance, let us take the American equivalent for the English game of cricket. The knowing reporter writing a description of a game of baseball never makes the mistake of calling the ball "the ball." To him, of course, it is the "sphere," the "pellet," the "pea" or the "leather." A batsman never strikes out, but "he fans" or "he pounds the air." The pitcher does not pitch; he does "slab duty" or he "bends them" or he "passes them up." We might continue in this strain indefinitely.

To refer to a baseball team representing a certain city by its proper name would be to betray a woeful lack of knowledge and experience. A few years ago, after the veteran ballplayer Anson relinquished his leadership of the Chicago team, that team was, for a short time at the beginning of the season, without any nickname whatever. Sporting writers all over the country were in a state of chaos. The Chicago newspapers opened their columns to suggestions for a suitable sobriquet, and matters generally were unsettled and unsatisfactory until the significance of the description of Anson as a "ball player" was discovered, and the Chicagoans immediately became "the Orphans." During the first two years of his career in the National League the New York team was known as the "Maroons." In 1885 this title was dropped for that of "the Giants," a term which at a period when the team was unpopular and despised as "the Finks." The Bostoners are, of course, "the Beaneaters;" the Washingtons, "the Senators;" the Baltimore, "the Orioles;" the "Birds;" the Brooklyn, "the Trolley Dodgers."

She (sincerely)—I despise you from the bottom of my heart! He (cheerily)—Oh, well, there is always room at the top.

Public speakers and singers know how useless and sickening are cough mixtures, sprays, lozenges, etc. for irritable or sore throat, and state that makes his base ball pitcher's Catarrh, the advantage of which is that it acts quickly and is convenient to use in public places. Catarrh relieves congestion, allays inflammation and is a protection to the membrane. As a safe guard against colds and Catarrh it has no equal. Rev. Mr. McKay, Goderich, says "Catarrh is an excellent remedy for throat irritation." Physicians, ministers and singers recommend Catarrh. Drugists sell it for $1. Small size 25c.
