Morld—Her Wedding Romance.

Adeiaide Ristori, Marchesa Capranica del Grillo, the Siddons of Italy, whose death was recently announced, and who was as delightful in comedy roles as she was impressive in those of tragedy, was born in the little Venetian town of Cividale del Friuli on January 29, 1822. Her parents were Antonio Ristori and Madalena Pornatelli, comedians in a company of strolling players, headed by one Cavicchi, and by them she was introduced to the stage when not yet three months old. In her memoirs the great tragedienne has called this debut a "howling success." The play was entitled, "The New Year's Glitt," and her part in it was to enter as the contents Ottawa, Nov. 3.—The Canada Gazette to-day will announce the opening of Parliament on Nov. 22 as foreshadowed in the despatches this week. four she was made to play a small part in a sort of vaudeville entertainment, and herself records that this appearance was an enormous success. She became a regular inember of the stroiling company, at ten years of age, playing servants' parts and at twelve being entrusted with premiere roles. Her salary at this time considerably exceeded that of her parents. She became the star of the company during the remainder of her short stay with it. Had Cream Next Day.

Local papers chronicle the fact that a few days ago there was found lying on the high sand beach of Big Sandy Pond, Lake Ontario, a bail eagle, with its talons firmly imbedded in the back of a huge pickerel. Frederick C. List, of Syracuse, chanced to discover the unusual sight as he was drawing his boat up on the beach. List, who is an enthusiastic fisherman, explains the strange phenomenon in this manner: The big eagle swooped down on the surface of the water and placed its talons deeply in the pickerel, which happened to be so heavy that the eagle could not pick it up, but, on the other hand, was drawn under the surface and drowned. The pickerel probably died of its injuries and the fish and bird were washed ashore a few she had become the first actress of Italy when in 1847 she married the young Marquis Capranica del Grillo and for two years interrupted her ar-and for two years interrupted and tistic career.

The romance thus brought to an issue had been of some years' standing and had been beset with all the difficulties which the young Roman noble's family could contrive to put in its way. The details of the story of Grillo's wooing of Ristori and its finale in an unconventional wedding make a very pretty and not unexciting romance. After her marriage Ristori left the stage, determined to devote the rest of her life to domesticity. But for her appearance at a charity performance in Rome in 1849, at the time of the sleeg, she might have kept this resolution. tistic career. ably died of its injuries, and the fish and bird were washed ashore a 'few days later. OPERATION WOUNDS.

Serious Danger to Which Surgeons Are Exposed—First Signs of Medical Blood Poisoning. By the term "operation wound" is meant a poisoned wound received ac-cidentally by the surgeon while operat-ing upon a patient suffering from blood poisoning, but it differs in no way from an accidentally poisoned wound which any one is likely to receive. It is simply the beginning of blood poisoning.

This term blood poisoning is employed to express a disease resulting from the entrance into the blood of the screen of purefection or of pus from the entrance into the shoot of the germs of putrefaction or of pus formation or the absorption of the poisons elaborated by these germs ex-isting on the outside of the body. It is a much less common affection now than it was before the introduction of a much less common affection now than it was before the introduction of antiseptic surgery.

In those days hospital wards, even the cleanest, harboned millions of septic bacteria. The knives and other instruments used in operating, although carefully washed in soap and hot water, were in effect no different from the poisoned arrows of the savage howman. The lint used to pack the wounds, the bandages employed to keep the lint in place, the sponge with which the wound was washed at each dressing, were all impregnated with living germs of disease, and finally the very hands of the surgeon, scrupulously clean as they seemed to be, were coated with the microbes of suppuration and putrefaction.

It is no wonder that certain operations now performed daily in every hospital in the country with perfect results were so uniformly followed by blood poisoning that the surgeon who dared to perform them, except when death would otherwise be inevitable, would have been guilty of malpractice.

To day it is not the patient who is in

This reduess soon extends up the inner side of the arm in streaks which mark the lymphatic vessels. The bacteria are passing through them to gain entrance finally into the general circulation. which the lymphatics pass, also become hard and swollen.

Soon the patient begins to have fever, alternating, perhaps, with chills, and then the symptoms of general blood poisoning appear.

The treatment of this infection is purely surgical. The wound should be freely cut open and disinfected so as to remove the source of the poison. If this is done in time and with sufficient thoroughness, blood poisoning may be averted.

The First Teetotal Pledge. On Sept. 1, 1832, was signed the first English teetotal pledge. It was drafted in the historic cockpit at Preston by the late Joseph Livesey, and the origi-nal (of which Lloyd's Weekly gives a facsimile) passed into the possession of Mr. John Cook, founder of the well-known firm of tourist agents.

It is still carefully preserved in a strong frame with plete-glass front and back of sheet steel. It was last lent to the north of England on the occasion of the centenary of the birth of Mr. Joseph Livesey. His son, Mr. William Livesey, who resides at Preston, is in his 91st year, and is the oldest pledged teetotaler in the world.

The Little Knowledge is Dangerous.

An imperfect or warped understanding of machinery and of processes and ignorance of what is being or has been accomplished are flooding the world with worthless inventions which waste both hopes and money. Good technical museums in the great centres of population and industry would doubtless have a correcting and also a chastening effect and help to bring men of overbubbling self appreciation to realize the fact that, barring accidents, it takes a good working knowledge of any particular industry to effect a reform of any commercial value in that industry. Thousands upon thousands of ideas are patented every year in utter disregard of the processes of manufacture which would have to be employed to produce the articles, and many of these patents; far from making an advance in any art, are really steps backward on the road of progress and represent a waste of legitimate mental energy which might be more profitably expended. "Novelty" is the cy. But freaks are mostly novelties.—Alfred Song in Engineering Magazine.

McDowell, Langton, Ont., writes: "In November, 1905, I caught a bad cold that settled on my lungs, so I got two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and used one and a half of them and by that time I was cured. I laid the balance of the bottle away for future use. A few days after our eight months' old baby took the whooping cough.

He was so bad we had to call the family physician, but he said he could do but little. I commenced using the Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and to my great satisfaction the baby was cured. I only used four 25 cent bottles; a small doctor bill.

WIFELY SYMPATHY.

There are Times When It Is Bad For a Husbard.

Suppose after a woman is married she finds that her husband is one of the kind who are easily discouraged the kind who are easily discouraged and who are quick to give up in the face of difficulties. How can she help him and arouse him from his feelings of despair and lethargy?

The problem is a difficult one, but by no means impossible of solution. A wife, however, must act warly and no means impossible of solution. A wife, however, must act warily and tactfully if she is to bring about the desired result. In the first place, of course, it is absolutely essential that she should hide her real feelings concerning her husband if these tend toward the slightest contempt.

Secondly, she must take care not to sympathize with his weakness. Easily discouraged men have a craving for sympathy which is very intense. A wife's sympathy with her husband's failures often causes the latter to lose energy, ambition and even shame at peing a failure. She thus does harm instead of good.

Hope, praise, encouragement—these are the levers with which a wife may spur her weak husband up the ladder of success, but sympathy will pull him down. Of course it is a difficult un-dertaking to alter a man's character and instill into him qualities that he does not possess by nature, but a wife's fortune is bound up in her husband's. What he is socially and finanbands. What he is socially and main-cially she is, and if she sits down quiet-ly and accepts failure she is as weak and as cowardly as he is.

A wife who wishes to encourage her husband should make him believe that she thinks him one of the cleverest of men. Not for one moment should she allow him to see that she does not consider he is the very essence of courage, determination and perseverance.

The more a man knows he does not possess these qualities for which his wife lauds him the more sure he is to wife lauds him the more sure he is to affect them and to try to live up to what he believes she thinks he is. There is no other man who makes such a show of bravery as the man who suspects his own courage. — New York American.

In an obscure but picturesque little village of faroff Germany there is a place called the "Chocolate Cure," where thin people go to become stout. The patients eat and drink cocoa and chocolate all the time while they rest, admire the scenery, gossip and grow fatter every day. The true secret of the great success of this treatment is the happy way chocolate has of fat-tening just the right places, settling in the hands, the arms, the neck and the shoulders, making the fair patient prettier and plumper all the The really effective part of this cure may be tried at home by any persewering woman, and the medicine is so very palatable and the method so sim-ple that there is actually, it seems, no reason why all of us should not be of just the desired weight; anyway, the suggestion deserves an honest trial, and even if nothing be gained, why, surely nothing can be lost.

A woman who found her steep back stairs as little ornamental as they were useful has had them converted were useful has had them converted into two clesets, one opening out of her dining room, the other on the second floor. The steps were removed bodily and a glass door opened into the dining room from where they had been. The space inside she had paneled, and rows of shelves were built in well up to the ceiling. The lower ones were used for china and the upper ones for preserves. A small window cut into the side yard admitted light into what was really a small shelf lined room. The whole cost little. Upstairs a capacious linea closet filled in the vacant space. Another woman who did not wish to have the stairs actually taken out had the upper landing converted into a cleset, but left the stairs underneath, using them from the first floor as a store closet for brooms, buckets and the like.
