FROM THE PEOPLE

JUSTICE FOR SOLDIERS.

To the Editor of The Gleaner, Sir,—Referring to a communication signed by Uncle Ruben, published in your paper of yesterday's date, this man makes a very bold attack on returned soldiers, and if he has a son a returned soldier more shame to him for writing such a statement, untrue in every particular.

In the first place a month or a year is absolutely not enough for a returned man to be re-established in civil life. If Uncle Ruben had lived the life of the average soldier the last four years he would never have written such a statement in your paper.

Concerning Canada's present re-establishment of returned men and the gratuity they have already given, it is no more than Canada should have done, considering the part Canadians played in the Great War.

Because other countries have done as much as Canada has done for her returned soldiers there is no earthly reason that Canadian soldiers should not have received the gratuity they have already given, as much as the Canadians got, and as much more as they could give him.

If a man receives money for certain duties, is it anybody's (least of all Uncle Ruben), to say which way he should spend it? That was nobody's business but the returned soldier's himself.

Your contributor also states he has a son a returned soldier, at the same time telling us that he was wounded in such a statement in your paper.
Referring to his theory "returned soldiers preferred," that is all bull.

A returned soldier is preferred for any job the average man will not touch.
The average man's returned soldier could supply him with that proof in and around Fredericton.

The trouble is this: The average Canadian man, woman or child, who never was out of this country while the war was on, never realized what it was to be a returned soldier. It was a great pity that he did not have dropped a load of bombs on Un-derwood's house. It would have brought home to him the realization that helping the returned soldiers did not mean hurting him at all.

One last word: If you cannot do any good in the world, don't do any harm.
This is for the benefit of Uncle Ruben. I would strictly advise him not to ever publish his name to that communication.

Re the industrial qualities of the returned soldiers, I think he is proud he has evidently tried his best to get along without bothering anybody.

MEANING OF TEMPERANCE.

To the Editor of The Gleaner, Sir,—Recently I read of a deputation preparing to see Premier Foster on "the temperance question." Do these people know what "temperance" means? I don't think they do.

"Temperance" does not mean "total abstinence."
A person who believes in temperance is not a teetotaler, he believes in being temperate in drinking, eating, smoking, etc.

Why should the country be run by persons who are so narrow-minded that they think a person who smokes and has a glass of beer, or whisky, as the case may be, is a confirmed drunkard and goes plunk to hell? I presume the inhabitants of Great Britain are all heathen.

If these persons were more temperate in their speaking, the community at large would greatly benefit by it.
Passyfoot will never make Great Britain dry, because the inhabitants there have enough common sense not to take any notice of such twaddle and are temperate in all things. Since being discharged from the army after five years' service overseas, I turned back to find that a part of my freedom (I presume, Mr. Editor, that the Union Jack stands for freedom, etc.), is taken away from us.

As one of the so-called "Drunk British Soldiers" who helped to defend the Empire in time of need instead of staying at home and making money, I make protest.

Yours,
KHAKI.
