Men Who Move Things

The Workers Place in the World—How They Control Supplies—What Recent Strikes Mean.

It has been pointed out that man can create nothing. All he can do is to move things, and the resulting combination is the result of his creative powers. As we used to tell in the nursery, the wood in our clothes was first on the sheep's back and our silks we owe to a worm.

The recent strikes at our great docks are teaching people some elementary lessons in the nature of commerce in the way wealth is created, and how our wealth and luxury would be at an end to-morrow but for the men who are willing to move and carry things. We cannot be independent of our fellow workers unless we are willing to do all our own work and supply our own needs. And even if we do that we shall have very poorly and our diet will have small range.

An Industrial Judge.

"The whole dispute says the Daily Chronicle, 'in London as elsewhere, emphasizes the importance of the suggestions which Sir Charles Macara recently made to the Lord Mayor of Manchester. The elaboration of commerce caused by industrial strife is a national danger. It imperils our position, says Sir Charles Macara, as a great commercial nation. Warfare in any one great trade means a loss to all. The inter-dependence of industries makes this question a national one. It is well worth considering whether the time has not arrived when some independent tribunal of a national character should be devised to meet the case of industrial deadlocks."

The Dockers.

Edward Kipling says we should starve but for the food which the Big Ships bring us, but the men who load and unload are as important as the ships. The men have only to refuse to unload the ships to cause waste of food and famine. This has happened this last few weeks. At Cardiff new potatoes were left to rot. In London there was a danger that meat would go bad if the refrigerators on the ships were not kept working. It was only an act of grace of humanity that permitted the meat to be supplied from the docks in the hospitals.

Our Meat Supply.

"One of the most serious conditions caused by the strike is in relation to the meat trade of London," says the Daily News. "In addition, enables it all kinds of unimpaired, waited to be unloaded from the inside of the ships standing idle in the docks. Some from the Argentine, packed in the tankers with frozen meat, ships from the Colonias with thousands of carcasses of mutton, await removal from the refrigerators. The meat itself will remain in good condition as long as the power to keep the refrigerating plant running is available, but when the coal supply gives out, and there are no men to load to a serious difficulty will be presented.

"London's permanent supply of frozen meat represents about a fortnight's consumption, but a week of the dock strike will not only stop supplies, but bring things to a serious crisis. In other provisions the country is not a month ahead of its necessities, and naturally every day must add to the difficulties of the situation."

It is estimated that in London the Dock Strike affected 20,000 men, who decided to stand together and to support the claims of each other. "Lightermen, wharf or hose, Coalwharf or House Dockers, wharf or hose. All wait until all are satisfied," said Mr. Harry Gosling, the president of the National Federation of Transport Workers.

Labour's Solidarity.

The solidarity of these workmen is further shown by the fact that it is useless to carry a ship to another port to escape trouble, for no men will unload or work on a ship which was destined for a port where there is a dispute.

Mr. Ben Hillier explains what was done in this way:—

"They sent a letter to Berlin to the Society of the International Workers' Union to request them to declare a strike in London and to announce in spreading discontent."

"The British Federation of Great Britain has decided to pass the question of securing the lowest minimum rate for working international places. From 10,000 to 12,000 labourers are on strike in the Queensland and German districts. They ask for increased wages—they now receive 12s. and 13s. a week. At the Port of London a thousand and partners are on strike to secure recognition for their Union and improved pay for overtime."

"In York, Newcastle, Glasgow, and Scotland, discontent is spreading among the employees of the North-Eastern Railway Company, WOMAN'S WORK is never done. So runs the proverb. But with Sunlight Soap as a helper the wash is quickly over. Dirt flies before Sunlight Soap like the morning mist before the rising sun.

and trouble is also brewing among the 5,000 employees at the wagon works of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company at Horwich. In Scotland the surface-men and plate-layers employed by the North British Railway Company at Glasgow have handed in their notices, as they intend to fight for an Eight Hours Day and a 2s. advance in wages.

"Labour is disorganised. Labour means to fight. But it moves clumsily and often uses obsolete weapons. On the other side the forces arrayed against it are mighty and strong. Capital is powerfully organized, and when wealth fights with poverty they do not battle on equal terms."

"The I. L. P. has a unique opportunity of enlightening public opinion in regard to its main principles. The workers are essential of capitalist wrong, but if they neglect the political machinery, the strike and lock-out will not, of themselves, save them from disaster. Never was the need for direct Labour representation greater than now; never was the need for industrial and political unity among the workers greater than now; never was the need for public ownership greater than now. We believe," concludes the Labour Leader, "the present Labour unrest, blind and hesitating as much of it is, will help to guide the workers towards the path leading to a more abundant life."

Star of the Sea.

Yesterday morning the members of the Star of the Sea Society marched in procession from their hall to the R. C. Cathedral, where they attended 8 o'clock Mass celebrated by St. Rev. Monsignor Roche. All the members of the procession had been to Confession the previous evening and yesterday morning received Holy Communion. The Feast being a great one, viz. the octave of the assumption of the Blessed Virgin, it was an edifying sight to see the men led by the officers and bearing banners approaching the Holy table with such earnestness and devotion, and is a hopeful indication of the Society's progress in the future.

Harbor Grace Regatta.

This, our greatest annual sporting event is to take place on Wednesday next. The Committee of the H. G. F. Brigade that have it in charge are:

John Tapp, Chairman; O. E. Grim, Secretary; T. G. Ford, Wm. Carson, Robert Tetford, Robert Lee, Jordan Sheppard, William Hayes, Robert Brazil, Charles Garland, Albert Rogers, F. C. Archibald, T. J. Freeman, Thomas Courage, William Madigan, W. W. French, H. F. Sheppard.

They have collected up to date a considerable amount of money for expenses, and hope to receive enough with further liberality to give substantial prizes as usual, and otherwise working hard to make the 1911 Regatta second to none of its predecessors. There will be four new boats on the course this year, and it is hoped the three older ones and perhaps others. There will be six events besides that for the Archibald Cup between the Capital and the Outports won by Carbonear last year.

We hope there will be a number of entries. It will be a gala day in Harbor Grace and at Carbonear; what with the Regatta Day, the Shamrock Excursion, and Garden Party at Carbonear in aid of St. Patrick's Church, under the charge of a committee of which Mr. L. Williams, Sept. U. T. E. Co. is chairman, and Mr. J. Mackey, Secretary.—The Standard.

A Home-Made Electric Sign.

One ingenious druggist uses some very effective electric signs of his own making.

He first secured some black, opaque paper. On this he drew the letters he wished to appear on the sign—then cut them out with a sharp knife. On the back of the cut-out letters he pasted coloured transparent paper. Next he secured some heavy white stained cardboard, cut it into strips and pasted it around the edge of the black paper, thus making a frame for it. This was then hung up in the shop and an electric light placed behind it.

The cut-out portion was thus prominently displayed in letters of fire, being readable at a considerable distance. Several of these signs with the display letters of each in different colors make a very effective display and draw the customer's attention.

A sign of this nature does the work of a more expensive one and can be made at small cost.
