R33 CALLED FOR HELP.

R33 DRIVING NORTH.
LONDON, April 16. The R33, which tore away from the mooring mast at Fulham, Norfolk, this morning, apparently cannot be headed homeward by the crew, twenty which was aboard her when she broke loose. There is no chance of the R33 returning to Fulham air station to-night, it was unofficially announced. The news that the R33 had gone away was the greatest air news sensation in Britain since the explosion aboard R33 in 1921, when the dirigible was wrecked on the trial flight near Hull with the loss of forty-six lives.

report which reached the Air Ministry that the airship had successfully ridden out the storm and was starting on the homeward journey from Holland, making from five to ten knots an hour, and expected to reach the air-drome to-morrow.

They were at the station and the Prince struck up a conversation with them, but neither recognized the Royal visitor until they had been talking with him five minutes.

Household Notes.

Before baking a fruit pie, stick small pieces of macaroni into the alitas to prevent the juice from escaping. Kitchen utensils only occasionally used should be kept in cupboards; others should be on handy shelves. Put your window screens in the bathtub every other week and spray them. The curtains will stay cleaner. Rub sagging cans seats first on top and then on bottom with hot water and soap. Dry in the open air. Sliced pineapple, apples, marshmallows and chopped nut meats, mixed with mayonnaise, make an excellent salad. If the bottoms of your rockers are waxed, they will not leave unsightly marks when dragged across the floors.

Masonic Billiard Tournament

HOW THE PLAIN SIDE WON.

Pray list to me whilst I relate A tale that gives me pain. A "Billiard Tourney" once took place Betwixt the "Spot and Plain": Were this not so, you might to-night Be eating ham or kippers. Instead of which you've had your fill Of Crossman's painless flippers.

Friend "Mac" he thought it "quite a joke," And "told some racy ones": But still he could not shake the nerve Of good old "Joey Nanna": He smiled, he laughed, he joked, he swore. He even tried to groan: But "Joey" just simply viewed him As a "new-style Gramophone."

The "Thistle" makes a sorry meal, As you'll agree "old fella's": If you're in doubt of what I say, Just question "Gussie Sellars." He tried to bite; the thistle stung; Which made "old Gussie" yell, And when the game was over, He told Dave to go to "Heaven."

Of course, "Will Bartlett" won his game, And then he started weeping; To think that he'd been mean enough To wallop "Benney Keeping." But "Benney" said, "I'll tell the world" I'll even tele-phon- "Bill" shaved so many shots to-night He should have brought a hone.

When "Rodger" saw "poor Gussie" fall, He weakly tried to whistle; Because he too essayed to eat An overdose of "Thistle." And when the sad affair was o'er, His voice was heard to falter; As in an undertone he said, "I've had enough of 'Walter.'"

As "undertaker" Johnnie shone! He buried "Stuart" deep; He meant to—stated from the start— You can "bank" I'll make him sleep. Well may your teardrops fall, To note the downfall of the strong. A "warning knell" foretold that night The fate of "S. A. Long."

When "Graham" marries, he should try To get by hook or crook; A girl domestic in her ways, A wholesome red-faced cook. Unless he does this, when he finds The steak a trifle tough; We trust that he'll remember that He one time spoiled a "Duff."

The atmosphere was lurid once, Ern Gear began to swear; Damnation take that "Taylor"! I'll have nothing left to swear. He takes my measure, sews me up, And when my nerves are frayed; Declares that some men think them For to "Taylor" is his trade.

We had a "Barbour" in the crowd, Who measured "half a yard"; And "Doc Carnell" grabbed a pitcher, "Clouston" showed a "Diamond" card; "He" "Pestered" many a secret hope. But now he sadly "Greaves," And "Peter" tries to cross the "Heath" Whene'er his home he leaves.

An "Angel" came to "Charlie P," And made him see the light; The "President" knocked "the noisy one" out. To "Ross"—in a "Peeler's" right. The "Rabbit" flew from "Fox"; And "Johnston" tried to "Fress," And then the "Spot side" made their "Wills," And tried to clean the mess.

In the last game of the series, The "Rabbit" flew from "Fox"; And tumbled something horribly A'tumbling o'er the rocks; But God was good, He caused the fox From out his path to roam, And ere he could regain the scent, Rabbit was safely home.
