The handsomest turnout on King street systerday was undoubtedly that of the popular yet. F. A. Campbell, who, accompanied by Mrs. Campbell and the Silent, handled the reins to perfection, the whole arrangement causing quite a buzz of admiration all along the street. Everything about the aristocratic rig was new, even to the silk handkerchief of the great Silent. The horses, a grand looking, showy pair of admirably matched geldings, respectively five and six years old and got by Ivanhoe and Dr. Butler, standing 16 hands high, were hitched together for the first time, but under the skifful tooling of the Doc. they conducted themselves as if they had spent their whole lives side by side and were proud of it.

could not recommend any compensation as the house's were built too low. A letter from the solicitor said that such claims were becoming too prevalent, and recommended that before a roadway was raised, parties whom it would affect should be consulted and their consent obtained. It was decided to raise the sidewalk. A petition to have the name of Herbert street changed to Robinson street was granted. A petition of property owners in East Rosedale, for a sewer, temporary or otherwise, to be constructed where Bloor creek now runs, was referred to the engineer.
