A Novel and Decidedly New Invention in Connection With Pianos. For some months past there has been miserable and pessimistic.

Mr. Bent recently made a visit to Guelph and other Canadian cities in order to give the piano people a chance to see for themselves exactly what he had, and then, apparently feeling confident that he had duly impressed them with the importance of his interest in the couly returned to his native country and let the Canadian makers go to him and bid aganst each other for the exclusive Canadian right to use it. We have been informed that the bidding was very spirited and high indeed, and that many thousands of dollars are involved in the final purchase, which has been made by the Bell Organ and Piano Co., Ltd., of Guelph.

The invention consists of a series of leather thongs or tongues with metal insides which hang between the hammers and strings of the piano and which when operated by the 4 different pedals with which each instrument is provided produce at will exact representations of the harp, the mandolin, banjo, guitar and the zither.

The effect is truly marvelous and defies description, and is undoubtedly an entirely new departure in the art of piano manufacturing.

Orangemen, their wives, families and sweethearts, turned out in large numbers, the occasion being the annual games of the 'Prentice Boys at Centre Island Park. The day was spent in games, and in the evening dancing was indulged in at the Pavilion. A number of prominent Orangemen were present. A 10-year-old boy named Harry Robinson created a small sensation among picnickers by falling into the bay near the old wharf. Fortunately they are the old wharf. Fortunately they are dout more frightened than hurt.

Crathie Held Liable For Loss of Elbe. Bremerhaven, Aug. 12.-The Admiralty Court, after a sitting lasting ten hours, yesterday rendered a decision in the case of the North German Lloyd critical moment.

One evening Julia announced that a Steamship Company against the owners of the British steamer Crathie, by which vessel the company's steamer Eibe was unk off Lowestoft, Eng., in January last. The Court found for the steamship company, and held that Mate Craig of the Crathie was guilty of quitting the bridge of his ship before the collision without adequate reason. The chief officer of the watch on the Eibe was censured also for neglecting to shift his helm and use his steam signals. The verdict exonerates the captain of the Crathie from all blame for not rescuing the crew and the captain of the Crathie from all blame for not rescuing the crew and passengers of the Elbe inasmuch as his own vessel was dangerously damaged by the collision. A warm tribute was paid by the court to the crew of the fishing smack Wildflower, who rescued the survivors of the disaster and landed them at Lowestoft.

A WOMAN'S FACE.

Only one glimpse of it was all that Julian Chestwick caught in the sway-ing crowd that filled the rooms on the night of Mrs. Pelgrove's masquerade ball, yet it struck on his consciousness at the idea of love. But when he saw 200 years? and a mouth whose sweet archness corresponded not illy with powdered locks and dainty high-heeled boots. It came and went like a shadow-the bewitching face—and Julian Chestwick a yo hastened to his hostess with heart that throbbed with the fevered quest:

"Tell me, Mrs. Pelgrove, who is the marquise?"

Mrs. Pelgrove stared. "My dear Mr. Chestwick there are at least half a dozen marquises here." Julian bit his lip. To him there was

Julian looked awkward; he could not very well say "a face." So he said nothing at all, and in consequence thereof his uncle went home in a passion and altered his will. Miss Pearlfield married somebody else and Julian Chestwick worshipped at the shrine of the oval face, contented with its remembered smiles as they haunted his dream. "I shall-see her some day," he told himself, "and until then I will wait." He haunted the galleries of photo-graphic artists—he stalked up and down the sunny side of Broadway what time the fashionable promenade inundated it, staring persistently into every feminine face that passed—but in

The jeweled finger of the beautiful Marie de Roubise seemed to beckon him—her arched, jetty brows to con-

Had it then been a ghost whose beauty had gleamed on him once, at Mrs. Pelgrove's masquerade ball? And was it possible for a man to look on the face of a woman who has been dead He followed the party down stairs,

"I dressed like it for a masquerade ball in New York last winter," laughed Marquerita herself, "and you would have fancied I had just stepped out of the frame."

"Before you went to Havana?" asked one of the Miss Pakenhams. "Yes."

The riddle was solved at last! Chestwick's heart grew light as a feather within his breast, and life became a possibility of brightness once more. "I'll marry that girl," said he to him-You see our friend hadn't cured him-self of the habit of rash vows even yet. But he kept this one. When he went away from Pakenham Court, Marquerita Leslie had promised to become his wife. "It's a very short acquaintance, though," observed Miss Leslie, with a demure shake of her diamond eardrops.

"No it isn't; it's a very long one," When Field Pakenham invited him said Julian earnestly. And then he told her how, when and where he had first fallen in love with her. "And you have really loved me all this time?" she asked. "I have."

"Dear me-I didn't know there was so much constancy in man!" was her answer.—New York News.

healthy. Health really tells the whole story. Health means strong nerves and strong body, and they go far toward bringing good looks and amiability.

A woman worn and wearied by the dragging weaknesses peculiar to her sex, cannot be expected to find zest in any duty or amusement. Life is all one dead monotonous gloom to her. On her face is written the story of weakness and pain. The wholesomeness of health is lacking. The cheeks lack fullness, the eyes lack sparkle, the hair lacks luster.

Doctors have learned to locate ninetenths of womanly sickness in the organs that ought above all others to be strong and healthy.

Sensitive women shudder at the

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has cured thousands of severe cases of "fe-male weakness." It works in a natural, sensible way. It begins by subduing the inflammation that is always present. Then it strengthens and invigorates the whole body, particularly the organs distinctly feminine. It promotes regularity, cures inflammation and ulceration, and stops the debilitating drain caused by them. Of all dealers.
