Weddings

Short-Ingram

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. T. Ingram, in Mitchell, recently when her only daughter, Miss Alberta, became the bride of Elgin Short, of Mount Forest. The marriage was performed by Rev. W. H. Roberts, of the Anglican church, in the presence of only the immediate relatives, and after the ceremony a delicious wedding dinner was served in the dining room, which was beautifully decorated with flowers and ferns. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Short will take up their residence on the bridegroom's farm near Mount Forest. During the week previous to the wedding a miscellaneous shower was held for the bride at the home of Mrs. W. Stenman.

Turnbull-Ramsey

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Ramsey, second line, East Wyoming, was the scene of a pleasing event last Wednesday, when their second daughter, Maymie Maude, became the bride of Robert J. Turnbull, of the fourth line, Sarnia Township. Rev. J. S. Forester, Presbyterian minister from Burn's Church, Sarnia, performed the ceremony at high noon under an arch of evergreens and pink and white roses. The bride and groom were unattended. After the wedding a delicious lunch was served at tables decorated in pink and white with streamers of the same color attached to the ceiling. The wedding gown was a handsome sand-colored tulle and the going away suit navy blue with hat to match. Guests from Corunna, Sarnia, Stoney Creek and other places were present. The bride, Edmonds, of Sarnia, sister of the bride, played the wedding march as the bride entered on the arm of her father. Mrs. Turnbull, accompanied by Mrs. Stanley Elliott, also of Ingersoll. The house was decorated with tulips and snapdragons. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was unattended and wore a becoming gown of powder blue tulle and carried a shower of roses. A reception and wedding luncheon followed the ceremony, and later Mr. and Mrs. Ashton left for Detroit. On their return they will live in London. Out-of-town guests for the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gunning, of Granton; Miss Gladys Talbot, of Grimsby; Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Jeffrey, of Windsor; Miss Maggie Guest, of Ayr, and Mrs. Stanley Elliott, Miss Nellie Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. Ed McVea and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Young, all of Ingersoll; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gunning, of Granton; Dr. and Mrs. John Downing, of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. John Maplase, of Harrietsville.

Ashton-Talbot

A quiet wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Talbot, Cynthia street, when their daughter, Mabel Elizabeth, was married to Raymond E. Ashton, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ashton, a. s. of London. Rev. J. T. C. Morris officiated at the wedding, which was played by the bride's sister, Miss Elsie Talbot. During the signing of the register Miss Nellie Hutchinson, of Ingersoll, sang delightfully, accompanied by Mrs. Stanley Elliott, also of Ingersoll. The house was decorated with tulips and snapdragons. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was unattended and wore a becoming gown of powder blue tulle and carried a shower of roses. A reception and wedding luncheon followed the ceremony, and later Mr. and Mrs. Ashton left for Detroit. On their return they will live in London. Out-of-town guests for the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gunning, of Granton; Miss Gladys Talbot, of Grimsby; Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Jeffrey, of Windsor; Miss Maggie Guest, of Ayr, and Mrs. Stanley Elliott, Miss Nellie Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. Ed McVea and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Young, all of Ingersoll; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gunning, of Granton; Dr. and Mrs. John Downing, of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. John Maplase, of Harrietsville.

FAVORITE FOR SUMMER.

The combination of printed and plain fabrics is one of fashion's favorites this summer. Here three bands of the plain material give a charming bouffant effect to the skirt and the sash forms the only other trimming necessary besides the bows on the sleeves—always a feminine and alluring touch.

Interesting Family Group

The above picture represents a well-known group of people in St. George's and vicinity. They are, left to right, back row: Mrs. C. Kitchen, age 21; Mrs. L. Cornell, age 47. Front row: Mrs. J. Roseburgh, age 67; Miss Edna Kitchen, age five, and Mrs. H. Howell, age 88. Mrs. H. Howell, the great great grandmother of little Edna, has 36 direct descendants, 32 of whom are living. She has four children, 12 grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren. Mrs. Howell was predeceased by her husband in August, 1921. Although in advanced years, she is still well and strong. Of her family of four, three are still living.

Covent Garden Market Parade Ground On Saturday Morning For Annual Grand March of the Tulips

Farmers Undismayed By Chill Winds and Frosty Nights; Market In May a Place of Beauty and a Place of Plenty

"Things are coming up in the garden, in spite of the cold. I don't see how they do it." So spoke a gardening lady on the market on Saturday morning. She had forgotten a promise, made in a dark day when the world had ceased to be a garden; a promise that "seed time and harvest should not fail." Scant sunshine, chill winds, frosty nights, are serving to add a gray hair or two to the agriculturist's coiffure, but there were glorious signs of plenty on Covent Garden Market on Saturday morning, and the folk from the country, gallant folk, these who will not be discouraged, were looking forward with immense optimism to the coming of the rush of growth to make up for the lulling of the past few weeks. After all, if you consult the oldest inhabitant, and he is honest about it, he will tell you that every spring has been "the latest in the history of the community," every winter an iron one, every summer, too, wet or too dry, or too something. And in the end it all turns out as it should. For every day of frost in the spring there is an added day of golden summer in the autumn. Somewhere or other the Great Gardener strikes a balance. The farmers know. They are not afraid.

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE

It was a place of plenty, a place of splendor, Covent Garden Market, on this last Saturday in May. And a place, primarily, of flowers. "It just came true," a market maid said, and she rubbed her eyes and looked again at the tulip stall, where these fine soldiers of the spring stood in mass formation, here, flying banners of crimson and rose and gold, and snow-white pennants picked out in crimson and rose. At one stall alone there were 450 of them and the garden was not depleted. It took three men an afternoon to pick them; "hard on the back," one of them told us, but with a cheery smile the said jewels were well worth stooping for. At some of the stalls the most ordinary held the regal splendor of them. It was like a dream, and made another week and the waking world must go by before the annual pageant is repeated.

It was a flower market on Saturday. There were edible things, necessary things, as well, but nothing so necessary as the glory of the spring blossoms. Fansies by the hundreds, ready for setting out, but too impatient to wait for the prescribed moment, peeping their pussy faces from velvet cups from beneath the close green leaves. Forget-me-nots, fringed daisies, the first of the shirley poppies, like dainty ladies in daisy-yellow, yellow tulle and velvet brown cowlings like imprisoned bumble bees, white narcissi with their crimson collars like supple acolytes calling the season to prayer—what a lovely voice there is for the old-fashioned posies in these "romantic days."

THE ARTISTIC STALL

That the artistic stall will bring in the shekels is the wise notion of a lady who learned her farming in England. Her stall is ranged with lettuces, emerald green and dewy, with rhubarb and radishes making a brave showing behind, and baskets of asparagus in tempting bunches, for all the chilly weather selling at the not exorbitant price of 15 cents per bunch. In the midst of it all she had set a fragrant cluster of pink sweet peas from her greenhouse, the "painted ladies" of an earlier, finer, grown to finer estate. Cucumbers were in profusion, ranging from 10 to 20 cents, watercress was in crisp, cool bunches, you could see the low-lying green meadow and the lush grass and the little amber brook from which eager little hands had gathered.
