

False Economy.

With some inflexible housewives it is a boast that they never allow a fire in the sitting-room after the oak-apple is formed on the tree; and so, in our crude spring seasons with an east wind blowing through every cranny, a family group is doomed to shiver, and the result is influenza and a doctor's bill exceedingly the cost of a ton of coal.

There is, in some households, an especial observance of the twilight, at which hour a sort of curfew provals, and a temporary cessation of employment is insisted on for the purpose of saving an inappreciable amount of gas or oil. The waste of that greatest treasure—time, is not considered. Within some other four walls, cold mutton is still a tradition, and persistently appears at the ill starred juncture known as "washing-day."

A Blessed Prospect.

The ties which bind together a family who all have a good Christian hope, shall never be dissolved. Death comes among them; but we take the Bible in our hands and inscribe on their tomb-stone: "Pleasant in life, and in eternity not divided."

Births, Marriages and Deaths.
