

ONE of our students of especially attractive appearance (at least he thinks so himself) was driving a pair tandem in the city the other day. The lead animal, however, was so violently smitten by the attractions of her driver that she absolutely refused to go on, but turning around in her traces contemplated long and ardently the young man's classic features. Exasperated at last, our friend shouted out "You go on," but the animal replied, "Nonsense, You come on," (Newcomon) see?

THROUGH some unaccountable oversight the names of the 3rd. year students have not been published. We apologize to them for our neglect and append them as follows: Buchanan, Cowan, J. H. Field, Holliday, Hewgill, Hutt, Linfield, Palmer, Sharman, Sleightholm and Whitley. We are tempted to print a short description of each of these heroes for the guidance of strangers, but forbear, only saying that if any of you are visiting this institution and should see a particularly dignified personage to whom the others pay great respect then know him for a 3rd. year man.

AS WE stumbled along the dark corridors at night during the holidays, our craniums came into violent contact with radiators, etc., which caused multitudes of constellations to sparkle in the heavens, which enlightened our pathways and quite took the place of any artificial means of illumination. Although this system of lighting is economical, there are two serious objections to it. 1st. It is to be doubted whether we are fulfilling our mission in life when we serve merely as fire flies. 2nd. The light thus obtained is not sufficient to enable us to make use of the reading room in the evenings, and, therefore, it is to be hoped that the same beneficent power that supplies the College reading room with papers will, before another winter, provide light enough to enable us to read them and thus be benefited.

It was for the purpose of interviewing one of our numerous local celebrities that our special reporter strolled over to the "castle" the other day, where he was fortunate enough to meet Mr. Grey in the passage. Mr. Grey hospitably invited him into his room where the first object that caught his eyes, was a gracefully arranged array of femurs, tibiae, patellas, etc., on the wall. "Why, Mr. Grey," exclaimed our representative, "you must be an old and experienced veterinarian, did you ever have much practical work?" "Well," said Mr. Grey, yielding to the flattery, and becoming confidential, "quite a bit; when I was stationed in Umbala I had 100 cavalry horses to look after, and would often have half a dozen broken bones to set in one day, responsible work you know." "Of course, then, Mr. Grey, since you are such an old hand, there is no truth in that vile slander which accuses you of pointing to the shoulder joint as the seat of spavin in the class the other day." But here Mr. Grey hastily pleading an engagement disappeared, promising as he went to call and explain his peculiar views in the near future.

WHAT takes one of our undergraduates to Norfolk St. Church every Sunday evening? We notice that he is always down town excuse me, Arntown, I should have said the rest of the week.

MR. J. K. S. "No, I am not in love with a single girl in Guelph."

FRUSTRATED "What? none at all?"

J. K. S. "None, none, no e, at least only one."

1ST STUDENT "Do you believe in Phrenology?"

2ND STUDENT "Yes, to some extent."

3RD STUDENT "What is Phrenology anyhow?"

1ST STUDENT "A new kind of wheat," (and No. 3 believed him.)

STUDENTS at card party playing Whist.

1ST STUDENT (Apologising to partner after atrocious play) "Awfully sorry, but that's what comes from trying to think you know."

2ND STUDENT (Angry) "Think, you idiot, don't think at whist, but watch the game instead."

The following are the results of the Christmas examinations:
