The good men and true of Slieverue, some five miles from Waterford, have just worthily celebrated the restoration to his farm, after five years on the roadside, of Simon Denne, whose dauntless courage, unselfish patriotism and sturdy perseverance achieved a victory that ought to be an object lesson for the tenantry of Ireland. Your county may be congratulated, for your county, as I have said, is large and populous, and some crimes must always be found in a popu lation such as that. But it is always a subject of congratulation to those who are inhabitants of that county, and whose lot is cast there, to find that those crimes are so few and so free from serious element.

The Dublin Independent says: "The wife of a steward named Williams, in the employment of Sir Henry Cochrane, of Woodbrook, Bray, may be, presumably, happy in the reflection of the prosrerity which, it is stated, has overtaken her sister. The latter assets, the enumerators, in view of the ten millions, do not appear to have tells the Sultan with the utmost plainthought worthy of notice. Other nephews and nieces, it is stated, are also provided for, a Mrs. Thomas Wood and a Mrs. M'Gunigle getting $50 000 each. Mrs. Benn is a sister of Mrs. Williams. The legatee and his wife are, it is said, meditating the purchase of a County Wick-low estate, "so that they can settle down among their relatives" All of which reads so like the story of "Aladdin" that we would strongly advise prospective beneficiaries in the "Earle estate" to consult the books of the County Clerk of Queen's County, in the State of New York, and find out whether there is any such property registered there, before they waste any time or money in hunting after legacies that may exist only in the imaginations of wake-room dreamers, or legal cranks, on the lookout for a fee. In this practical end of the nineteenth century, properties worth millions do not go round begging for "owners" to pick them up.

INTERESTING FIGURES.

The Movement of Population in Country and City Life,

In the course of a recent address, at Boston, the Rev. A. D. Mayo gave the following interesting array of figures to and country life in the neighboring

In the Iyear 1790 there were in round numbers 3,930,000 people in the 13 United States, of whom 132,000 were found in six places of 8000 people and upward, being 3.35 per cent. of the entire population. In 1890, in the 45 states and territories, were found 62,622,000, of whom 18,285,000, 29.20 per cent. were residing in 455 communities of 8000 each ; the standard of city population adopted by the census. It is, however, to be observed that during the past six years the drift of population to the cities has probably increased in ascending At the monthly meeting of board of ratio. These have also been the governors of the Clare lunatic asylum in years most notable in human history for bringing men together through the development of the geni of modern life, electricity. To-day there are hundreds of communities, not exceeding 1000 (possibly 500), which, through the agency of the various forms of rapid transit, the telegraph, telephone, post office, express and the new journalism, are living substantially under the conditions and ideals of city life.

More than one-third of the people of the entire Union are now a city population. More than one-half the people in the North Atlantic and North Central States (including New England, the old Middle and the Northwestern states to the mountains) are now gathered in cities, of which three contain a population exceeding 1,000,000 each; while the greater New York, with the one exception of London, is now the most populous city on the globe. Six of these states have an average of 57 per cent. of their people in cities, little Rhode Island leading, with nearly 79 per cent., and Massachusetts a good second, with 70 per cent. of urban population The South Atlantic and South Central, including all the old slave states, save Missouri, contain, respectively, 16 and 10.45 per cent., while the new West, including the mountain and Pacific states, scarcely a generation old, have already one-third of their people living in these great families.

There are two important considera-The "strike" in the Dublin building tions that emphasize this fact of the trade has, unfortunately, entered on a drift to city life. First, the movement of the Masters' terms at the hands of the Carpenters' and Joiners' Association. It was hoped that a settlement might did not contain over 5 per cent., and have been arrived at on the basis of until 1850 less than 9 per cent, of the these terms, but the attitude taken by people. At the close of the civil war and reconstruction the percentage had ly, uncompromising; and the outlook risen to 21 per cent., and by 1890 per seems gloomier than ever. It is worthy haps one-third of the American people were living under city conditions.

In fact, in 10 leading states of the Union and in less degree in others, it cence and the people on the farms and in tination he got employment and that the villages are living according to the everything had prospered with him ideas and under the conditions of city since. Recently he had visited Canada

Second, even more important is the fact that the portions of the country thus distinguished are, beyond comparison, the most powerful in wealth and all the higher elements of modern civilization. Of the $65,000,000,000 of the national estimated wealth, in 1890, the North Atlantic states contained onethird and the North Central 5-18; the South Atlantic 1-13, the South Central and the new West each 1-11. In other words, the people of the states where the larger half of the population is living under city conditions, represent a valua tion of 9-18 of the entire national wealth; the 11 states whose valuation each exceeds $2,000,000,000 containing 40 of the $65,000,000,000.

The State of New York alone excels the Southern Atlantic by 3 and the Southern Central by $6,000,000,000. New York and Pennsylvania will "foot up" more than all the old southern states. New York and Massachusetts could buy them all out, except Missouri. And this excess of wealth is paralleled by the superiority of this great financial centre in all the higher elements of modern civilization, especially in drawing the most valuable immigration, including more than a million of superior white the past 20 years.

THE CRETAN SITUATION.

LORD SALISBURY'S ACTION MEETS WITH THE

APPROVAL OF ALL ENGLAND. New York, August 9.-Mr. Isaac N. Ford, in his special cable to the Tribune, says:—England has declined with dignity to do police duty for the Sultan in Crete. The proposal for international action there, like the project for a con-cert of the powers on the Armenian question, came from Vienna, but the proud nation which was duped then is now on the alert. Lord Salisbury, in re-fusing to commit England to the sense less and immoral policy of taking part in a blockade of Crete, has the moral sense of the nation behind him. Public opinion is well expressed by that staid, Conservative journal, the Standard, which ness that a series of amputations is necessary for the treatment of the malady from which his empire is suffering, and that it will be a clear gain to civilization and peace if the Cretan Christians establish their independence This line of comment, which is clearly inspired by the Foreign Office, is worthy of the best traditions of English diplomacy. The German press declaims against it as a betrayal of the European concert, but the diplomatic burlesque to which international action regarding the Armenian outrages was reduced, disclosed how valueless and powerless con certed diplomacy really was. England has ceased to be a good European in Tallyrand's sense, and is again completely isolated in continental diplomacy, but her decision is exercising an effective veto upon the immoral action of the remaining Europ an powers. There has been nothing in the recent diplomatic actions of England more creditable than her dignified and emphatic refusal to take part in the fantastic game of blindman's buff in the East. It is a logical sequence to England's decisive defeat on the Armenian question, when the Fereign office was battled by the treachery and indifference of its European allies. It now stands alone, but on the highest possible moral ground.

THE CZAR VERY NERVOUS

Berlin, Aug. 8-Despite the stremous efforts to conceal the real condition of the Czar's health it is generally believed that Prof. Mendel, the insanity specialist, has been summoned to St. Petersburg. The Czar is reported to be very nervous and in hourly dread of his life hundreds of arrests have been made during the fortnight at St. Petersburg, Warsaw, Kieff and Moscow.

WELL DIRECTED ASSISTANCE.

We often listen to appeals for help, and in many instances turn a deaf ear to them The following interesting account of aid rendered by a G.T.R. ticket agent was given in a recent issue of the Daily Witness:

It must be depressing to the cynic or the pessimist to read occasionally that gratitude and the remembrance of a kindness is not one of the lost virtues. A case in point is the following story related to a Witness reporter by the ticket agent at the Grand Trunk station one morning. He said: "About twenty years ago, and that's a pretty long time, I was approached by a man who said that he wanted a ticket for a western point in the United States. He was poorly clad, weary-looking, and appeared as though fortune and he had been at odds for some time and that he had been having considerably the worst of it. He told me that he hadn't a cent, but that if he could only get to his destination he would be all right and would remit me the value of the ticket if I would only trust him for one. I sized the man up. Many times I had accommodated people with similar stories and never heard of nor from them again. But I thought I could trust him with a ticket. At the expiration of a short time I received from him a remittance of the full value of the ticket and many thanks for having helped him out of a desperate plight.

'Yesterday morning a well-dressed, fine-looking man peered through the ticket-office window and after a long scrutiny of my face threw down a business card and holding out his hand aaked how I was and shook my hand very warmly. The card read: 'J. A. ____& Son, Swine Breeders, Centre street. Vermillion, Clay Co., South Dakota.' I told him I did not recognize him or his

'You may not remember me,' he said. but I recollect you very well, for I have had good occasion to do so, and I have come all the way from the Eastern Townships to Montreal to thank you personally for trusting me for that rail-way ticket to _____ twenty years ago way ticket to _____ twenty years ago when I was broke. Do you remember me, now?"

and could not resist the impulse to call and thank me for the little favor I had done him. One never knows what a single action may lead to. That man is rich to-day. Had he not been trusted for that railway ticket the current of his life might have gone the other way and he might have become-who knows what? 'But that is a very exceptional case, concluded the agent,' 'time and again, people are trusted and they never remember it.'

NATIONAL DAIRIES

IS THE LATEST SCHEME PROPOUNDED BY PROF. ROBERTSON OF THE EXPERIMENTAL

Prof. James Robertson, Dairy Commissioner, has returned from a tour of the North-West, with some new ideas as to methods for encouraging its development. In regard to dairying, he suggested that the Dominion Government shall loan $2,500 to any company of farmers subscribing themselves $500 to enable them to build and equip a first-class creamery, which is to be managed by the Government, and four cents a pound charged fer ex-penses to cover the cost of manufacturing the butter. He proposes to retain one cent per pound, also as a sinking fund to repay the loan. With its large acreage of pasture, he thinks butter making should be a staple industry in the west, and by shipping the product to the Old Country, it would be a great advertisement for the Territories.

Prof. Bobertson has also a scheme for tree planting on a large scale. Trials would at least, he save, demonstrate the effect of forest areas on the rainfall. He proposes that forest strips, at least 50 yards wide and ten miles long, should be planted a mile apart at right angles to the railway track. He thinks the railway companies, the Hudson Bay Company and the Dominion Government should unite to carry out this plan, the cost of which, including planting and five years of supervision, would not be more than 50 cents an acre of the land enclosed without their forest belts.

A POSSIBLE FAIR ATTRACTION.

It is possible that among the attractions at the coming Montreal Exposition will be the finest display of minerals from British Columbia eyer seen in Eastern Canada. When Mr. R. H. Pope, M. P., and his colleagues in mining development were in Rossland, the suggestion was made that a collection of specimes from the various mines should be made, and forwarded to the Toronto Fair. The idea was quickly taken up by the principal mining men in the Trail Creek District, and a very tine number of specimens. weighing in all about a ton, have been gathered together, and are now on their way to Toronto. The suggestion has been made to the directors of the Montreal Exposition Company, that an endeavor should be made to secure the collection for their fair after the Toronto show is over. Negotiations have been begun to that end, and many believers in the development of Western Canada will hope that they will be successful.

LIGHTHOUSES.

The first lighthouse of which there is Ptolemy Philadelphus, about 300 B.C. It was a tower on which wood fires were kept blazing at night. It was built on Pharos, a small island in the bay of Alexandria, and was one of the Seven Wonders of the World. It is an interesting fact that the modern French and Spanish names for lighthouse-the one being phare, the other faro-still pre-serve the memory of the island where the first attempt at sea-coast illumina-tion was located. The ruined tower in Dover Castle, England, erected about A.D. 44, is claimed by some authorities to have been built for a lighthouse, upon which an enormous wood fire was kept

The lighthouse on the southern end of the Island of Conanicut, at the mouth of Narragansett Bay, is said to be the oldest in the United States. The present structure is comparatively modern, but the first one was erected in 1740, and for nearly 100 years previous a watch-tower with a beacon fire had existed at the same point.

The lighthouse bears the odd name of Beaver Tail. The southern portion o Conanicut Island is shaped something like a beaver, with its tail pointing southward, and in early times it was known by that name, the two extremities being called head and tail.

Previous to 1789 the few lighthouses existing in the United States were maintained by the states in which they were situated, but from that date the expense was assumed by the general government, and in 1791 the first lighthouse under the new law was erected at Cape Henry. There are now some 650 lighthouses, lighted beacons and lightships on the coast and waters of the United States.

The state of Iowa is responsible for the mental impairment of one of its citizens. The passage of an anti-cigarette law made it difficult for Joseph Gerki, a confirmed victim of the habit, to get his favorite form of narcotic. Striving to adapt himself to the new order of things, he became ill and delirious-a condition which the attending physician attributed to the sudden cessation of cigarette smoking. Gerki is in a hospital suffering from a serious mental affection which may prove permanent. There is a moral lingering about this incident somewhere, but whether it is for the cigarette victim or the makers of laws the discriminating reader must determine for himself.
