INTRODUCTORY

In announcing the reestablishment of the NEW BRUNSWICK MAGAZINE as a regular publication, it is necessary to say a few words regarding its foundation. The first issue of the NEW BRUNSWICK MAGAZINE was in July 1898, under the able direction of the late William Kilby Reynolds. At the close of its first year Mr. Reynolds who had accepted the position of Press and Advertising Agent of the Intercolonial Railway found that his time was too fully occupied to continue the editorial and business supervision of the MAGAZINE, which in its first year had obtained a very respectable subscription list, and an arrangement was entered into by which the business end was to be undertaken by myself, and the editorial supervision was to be in the hands of others. Under this arrangement six numbers of the MAGAZINE were published, (the last in December 1899), but it had got so far behind time that it was then considered best to suspend publication until such time as it could be taken up and published regularly at a fixed date each month as it had been at the beginning. Because of the irregular dates of publication no call was made on the subscribers, until permanent arrangements could be made, although a number had sent in the amounts of their subscriptions without
