ADDRESSED TO
TWO GREAT MEN.

My LORD, and SIR,

YOU will be surpris'd at an Address made to you jointly in this Manner; but as I have not the Honour to be much acquainted with either of you, (though I esteem you both, at least while you remain connected), I hope you will forgive me for troubling you in this public Way; and the rather, as I think the Matters I shall write upon, to be of very great Importance; and as you will discover by what I am going to suggest to you, that I am a true Friend to Old England, and a sincere Lover of my Country.

I have long thought that our Ministers of State may be much assisted, in their Deliberations, by Persons who have not the honour of sitting at the Council-board. The wisest measures have often
