

WILSON VETOES PEACE MOTION OF REPUBLICANS

Denounces It As Omitting
Objects For Which U. S.
Fought.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The Republican peace resolution was vetoed today by President Wilson.

Such a method of making peace with Germany, the president said, would "place an ineffaceable stain upon the gallantry and honor of the United States."

Without announcing his intention regarding the treaty of Versailles, the president declared that the treaty embodied the important things omitted by the resolution, and said that by rejecting the treaty, the United States had declared in effect that it wished "to draw apart and pursue objects and interests of our own."

The president added that the peace resolution omitted mention of many important objects for the vindication of which the United States entered the war. "Such a peace with Germany," the message continued, "is a peace in which none of the essential interests which we had at heart when we entered the war, is safeguarded—no, no, ought to be, inconceivable as inconsistent with the dignity of the United States, with the rights and interests of honest citizens, and with the very foundations of civilization."

BRILLIANT SCENE AT JUBILEE SERVICES AT ASSUMPTION COLLEGE

Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop, Ten Bishops and 300 Priests Attend.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Monseigneur Ward Pleads For Less Clamor After Worldly Wealth.

WINDSOR, May 27.—Celebrations commemorating the founding of Assumption Catholic College, Sandwich, half a century ago, were commenced today, when His Lordship Bishop Fallon of the diocese of London, celebrated high pontifical mass in the presence of His Excellency Most Reverend Monseigneur Peter Di Maria, apostolic delegate of the Vatican to Canada and Newfoundland, and the most notable gathering of prelates and high officials of the Catholic Church ever assembled together in the country. Hundreds of worshippers gathered for the ceremonies held at Assumption Church today, where the poorest of the poor still shouldered on a footing of equality with the richest of the rich.

More Than 300 Priests.
At least 300 priests, a score of monseigneurs, ten bishops, and archbishops presented a magnificent spectacle, as, clad in their priestly attire, they formed a procession through the principal streets of Sandwich from the college to the church.

Prominent in today's program in addition to Bishop Fallon and the apostolic delegate were His Grace Archbishop McNeill of Toronto, Bishop Ward of Kansas City, Bishop Gallagher of Detroit, Bishop Kelly of Grand Rapids, Bishop Schrembs of Toledo, Monseigneur West of St. Thomas, Monseigneur Whelan of Toronto, Mr. A. J. Ward of Sarnia, Mr. Van Antwerp of Sarnia, Mr. McKinnon of London, Mr. O'Connor, V. C., of London, and Rev. Father J. P. Player of Toronto, head of the Basilian Order in Canada, which founded the institution.

Religious Education.
Monseigneur Ward of Kansas City himself a graduate of the institution, preached a powerful sermon today, in which he advocated more attention to things spiritual and less clamor after worldly wealth, position and power. He declared that after all the main object of life was not to acquire temporal possessions, but to justify existence by true service to God. He made a plea for more attention to education in religious matters, instead of the present tendency whereby children are taught to outstrip others in business competition.

Presentation Made.
Presentation was made by Mayor Donnelly and members of the Sandwich council, who were guests of the faculty of Assumption College, Sandwich, today at the jubilee ceremonies, of a purse of gold from the citizens of the town to the college in recognition and appreciation of the work of the institution during the 50 years of its existence.

FOREST FIRES GAIN IN NEW BRUNSWICK; SITUATION SERIOUS

Early Rain Is Only Thing To Save Timber, Belief.

FREDERICTON, N.B., May 27.—Approximately 200,000 feet of standing timber on crown land near Hebertville, Northumberland County, N.B., have been burned. With no rain and none in sight, the forest fire situation throughout the province shows no improvement, and is, in fact, getting worse every day. Some calls have been obtained from the cancellation of all permits for burning brush and slash, which order was signed yesterday by Hon. Dr. Smith, minister of lands and mines, upon recommendation of Provincial Forester J. H. Prince, but only rain can bring about much of an improvement, it is believed.

O. T. A. CASE FOLLOWS AN AUTO ACCIDENT

ST. THOMAS, May 27.—Information has been laid by the license inspector under the Motor Vehicle Act, against three of the occupants of the car that went over the Fingal hill into the ravine a few days ago, and one of whom was seriously cut and bruised. The charge of having violated the act, while driving his auto, makes the offense a serious one.

HELENE'S MARRIED LIFE

Copyright, 1920, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate
LXXXIII—A Lame Excuse.

Well, I must keep cheerful, for Jim's sake. I glanced at my wristwatch. It was after 5 o'clock. He probably had had his tea by now. I'd missed that pleasurable little rite. Alice's telegram for a hundred dollars had robbed me of my tete-a-tete with Jim. The knowledge did not tend to make me feel any less lenient towards that little minx. It was twenty minutes after five when I got home. Jim was asleep. His mother said. She looked at me rather reproachfully, as though she were condemning me for breaking a cherished appointment with her son.

"He was very sorry you couldn't take tea with him, Helene. And then his head began to ache. So I packed him back to bed. He's doing now."

She didn't invite me into his room throughout the evening, although she and I dined together in the big dining-room. We were expecting Alice. But when the meal was over—at half-past eight o'clock—Alice had not arrived. To my relief I found the car back in the garage. Mr. Anstruther had left burglaries, and heaven knew what, town was the only place she could endure these days.

I smiled as I read Alice's note. It was so true to type.

And yet I didn't feel like smiling, when I thought of her. In a way, I was responsible for the flighty-headed creature.

Ought I to go up town, and keep an eye on her?

Besides, Alice was evidently staying at a very expensive hotel. Her mode of living was beyond my means. Financially, I couldn't keep her pace. And, socially, I had no wish to do so.

"Oh, it's none of my affair," I told myself a little bitterly, as I crushed her note into a tiny ball, and stared gloomily through the window at the depressing wetness outside. "Alice must 'dree her own weird,' as the Scotch say. I can't stop her."

Jim's mother came into the breakfast-room. She looked bright and pleased with life today.

"Jim's so much better, dear," she beamed on me. "I'm hoping that the doctor will permit him to be moved."

"To be moved?" I repeated lamely, with a queer contraction of the heart. If Jim and his mother were to leave Anstruther Lodge, I should be alone indeed!

She moved towards me.

"And I want you to come with us, Helene," she touched my hand with a motherly, affectionate gesture. "You mean so much to Jim and me. Often I have wished I'd had a daughter. You've been so kind and good and unselfish, dear."

Quick tears sprang to my eyes. It is very good to be appreciated.

But aloud I merely said, in a voice I tried to make sound easy and natural: "It's awfully kind of you, Mrs. St. Aubyns, but in a sense I'm in charge down here. I don't see that I can leave."

The quizzical light appeared for a moment in the other's eyes.

"The mistress of the house doesn't a few days, Helene." Here she moved a little nearer to me. "If you won't pay us a longer visit, a few days of your cheerful company would be such a comfort. Besides—my husband would be charmed with you, and that would make things so much easier for my poor Jim."

I didn't ask the reason why. I guessed the answer to the riddle. Jim's mother heartily approved of me. She was a matchmaker at heart. She wanted her husband to like me, too—and through that very liking, to be more kindly and leniently disposed towards his son.

"If Alice doesn't come back, in meantime—" I began.

"Then that's settled," said her mother, evidently relieved. "Now, it only remains to see the doctor."

TOMORROW—BACK TO TOWN.
