Place is given in the new galleries to J. Campbell Nobie of the Royal Scottish Academy, one of the best and most favorably known of the Scottish schools. He is represented by six works, all notable and worth careful study. They are remarkable for their admirable sense of distance and fine harmonies, as well as typical of the poetry of feeling in which the themes are steeped. "Evening, Strathspey," "First Snow, October," "The Hill of the Little People" and "The Thames at Greenwich," all exemplify the traits which have caused the Glasgow group of painters to be regarded by continental critics as the creators of a new and living school of landscape painting, Another and distinguished member of the group is James Paterson, A.R.S.A., whose "Bridge of Dean, Edinburgh," is a faithful reproduction of a striking bif of the grey metropolis of the north. is a faithful reproduction of a striking bif of the grey metropolis of the north. Women's Art Exhibit.

Conspicuous for artistic charm and interest is the special exhibition representative of the art of Scotland and the Netherlands, now open under the suspices of the Women's Art Association of Canada in the new galleries, La Plass, 184 Jarvis-street. It was a happy idea to combine the Dutch and later Scotlish schools, since they have much in common, while at the same time each is individual and distinct. La Grippe Arrested and Consumption Prevented

Mr. G. D. Colwell of Walkerville, Ont., and employed by the Canadian Bridge Co., Walkerville, says: "When I began using PSYCHINE in October, 1906, I was all run down and bordering on consumption. I could not sleep nights. I had night sweats frequently and coughed the greater part of the night. I was very weak and nervous. Psychine worked marvels and made a new man of me and I have been in good health since. Since then I have used PSYCHINE each winter for La Grippe, and it has put me right in no time. I am now in the best of health, although my work is hard, and I take every opportunity of putting in a good word for PSYCHINE."
