French Opera Company.

When Mr. Oscar Hammerstein went to Paris last season to engage his French Opera Company for his Manhattan theatre. New York, he found it necessary not only to bring the principals to this country, but also the chorus. This naturally entailed a great expense, and before the artists and other members of the company would leave Paris it was found necessary for Mr. Hammerstein to put up a bond of $200,000 in American money for their return. This necessitated, not only the filing of the bond in the United States and France, but the securing of insurance on each member of the chorus and principals, too, in a way to protect Mr. Hammerstein against this bond. Up to date there has been no sickness or accident in the organization. This mammoth company will appear at the Royal Alexandra all next week. ITS BEST

"The House Next Door." At the Princess Theatre on Monday light, local theatregoers will have their first opportunity to witness J. E. Dodson, the English character actor, Dodson, the English character actor, in the stellar role in J. Hartley Manners' comedy of English life to-day, entitled "The House Next Door," a play that ran for two seasons in New York. Mr. Dodson has long enjoyed the distinction of being the best character actor on English-speaking stage. He is equally celebrated in London and in New York, and his fidelity to stage detail, his mastery of the art of make-up and general stage technique, to say nothing of his authoritative playing, warrant the title given him by the late Sir Henry Irving, namely, "The British Coquelin." 'The British Coquelin.

"The House Next Door" deals with social and financial conditions, the clashing and final amalgamation by a double intermarriage of an impoverished British family of ancient title with that of a newly rich. The son and daughter of the English baroner have fallen in love with the children of a paryenu millionaire, just knighted, who lives next door. The fathers of the two families become bitterly opposed to their children's attachments, but their sons and daughters are of a new generation and are liberal in their views on this subject. The hatred of the old aristocrat for his parvenu neighbors, whom he insults on every possible occasion, always thinking up some new means of siving offense, and the complications which ensue, when it is understood this scion of the no-bility is the latter's debtor, afford in-gowns are magnificent, and he will expressibly amusing complications. The keynote of the comedy is the ant characters—the one an aristocrat by heredity, the other a man of the people. The aristocrat born with every advantage finds himself in his declining years penniless, friendless, hated. Unwillingly the aristocrat is forced to appreciate that in this particular in-stance "birth" that had no majesty in its inception achieved a distinction rarely reached by those with the ad-vantages of a great name behind them. The comedy will be handsomely staged. The supporting company are a notable one, selected for their special personalities as representative of the

In this great rac-ing play, he clothes the role of Joe Braxton with his infectious good-will and humor, and in the sketching of the story, again proves his marked skill as a dramatist and clever actor. Mr. Higgins has been featured in "His Last Dollar" for the past five seasons with remarkable success. It is a racng play with a frenzied finance touch, brightened by good wholesome comedy, while the scenic embellishments are beautiful and realistic. Clare Armstrong, a beautiful and talented young leading lady, will be seen in the part of Eleanor Downs, the Kentucky girl, and Marjorie Ellison, as "Viola Grayson," the adventuress; Bliss Milford, fresh from her recent hit in the "Candy Shep," has the part of Alicia Giles, ernment house, or by Mr. Albert Nord-heimer, chairman of the music com-mittee, or by Mr. Stewart II. The health we enjoy depends very largely upon how the blood circulates in our bodies; in other words, if we have perfect circulation we will have perfect heets. There is a constant wearing out of the tissues in every part of the body. The blood flowing through the veins carries off this waste or dead matter, while the blood coming from the heart through the arteries brings the fresh new living tissue, the essence of the food we have digested, to replace what has been carried off. This constant wearing out and expelling of the dead matter and the replacing of it with new matter, atom by atom, goes on day and night, until in about 7 years a complete change has been effected. Thus every man and woman has an entirely different body in every particle of it from what he or she had 7 years before.

It sometimes happens, however, from a variety of causes, that the blood becomes congested in certain portions of the body. This means that the blood vessels in these parts become weakened, and the circulation in that section of the body becomes sluggish and stagnant. The consequence is that the dead matter in that part of the body is only partially carried away, and that but little of, the new, vital matter is introduced there to build up and strengthen the tissues and nerves.

This condition invariably exists in all cases of fe-and stagnant. The consequence is that the clead mater in that part of the body is only partially carried away, and that but little of the new, which matter is introduced there to build up and strengthen the tissues and the control of the control
