IS MOST COMPLEX POLITICAL FIGHT Situation in Canada on Nomination Day.

Four Parties and Also Independents—Women Candidates Number Four—Ontario Looked On as Central Battle Ground.

(Canadian Press) Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Candidates for Canada's fourteenth parliament were nominated today in the 228 federal constituencies of the dominion, and the most complex political battle in the history of the dominion entered on its final phase. Three provincial fights will be common in every province. In Ontario, Quebec, Alberta and Saskatchewan, in one case, even six candidates for one seat. Never in a federal election before have there been so many candidates in the field and apart from official party candidates independent candidates are in evidence. Quebec has around thirty of them; Ontario and the western provinces have more.

The election will also be the first with women candidates, but they will not be so numerous as was thought might be. Today's nomination campaign in Ontario, with its eighty-two seats in the central battle ground. In almost every riding, there will be a Conservative, a Liberal and a Progressive. The premier leader, will return to Ontario this week to renew his campaign. Hon. T. A. C. Crerar, leader of the Progressive party, will spend the time remaining before election day in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, but members of the Ontario government and U. E. O. campaigners, are carrying on the Ontario fight for the Progressive. The Canadian labor party, which has four seats in the House of Commons, has comparatively few candidates in the field. The issue of the election is a struggle, which will be among Conservatives, Liberals and Progressives.

But whatever the result of the elections, the next house will be a house with many unusual features. Public life for many years, will be missing. Sir Robert Borden, who was prime minister from 1911 to July of last year, has retired. Sir George Foster, who was first elected to the House of Commons thirty-five years ago, Hon. N. W. Rowell, Hon. J. D. Beld, Hon. J. A. Calder, Hon. J. C. Sibley, Sir Thomas White, Hon. T. W. Crothers and Hon. R. W. Wignome, all of whom have occupied seats on the front government benches, were not numbered among today's candidates. Of their number, Messrs. Rowell and Crothers have been appointed Calder and Crothers to the upper house.

In party ranks too, there will be numerous changes. A. Mahabir prominent in the Progressive party since its formation, has left the federal arena. In the Ontario government, Sir Thomas Crothers, who made a special study of soldiers re-education, was chairman of the special public committee too, has left public life. Dr. Clark, orator of the Progressive movement, last session, has returned to the Liberal party.

Of cabinet ministers nominated today, six did not sit in the last parliament. Hon. R. B. Bennett, minister of justice; Hon. J. P. Norman, president of the privy council; Hon. Andre Fontaine, solicitor general; Hon. L. G. Beldy, postmaster general; Hon. Rodolphe Peck, minister of state and Hon. J. B. Baxter, minister of customs.

For William, Oct. 21.—The opening of what probably will be the most strenuous period of Mr. Meighen's election campaign was featured by two large meetings in Fort William and Port Arthur last night.

Quebec Fight. Montreal, Nov. 22.—With Liberal candidates chosen in every one of the sixty-five constituencies in Quebec, and with fifty-three Conservatives, twenty Progressives and twenty-nine Independents selected official indication is that every seat will be fought for. The Independents are mostly men with labor affiliations or Liberals.

The four French-Canadian who became ministers when Mr. Meighen's government was organized, running in Charlottetown-Montreal: Hon. A. Poutoux, running in Terrebonne; Hon. J. P. Norman, secretary of state, candidate in Beauharnois, and Hon. Dr. L. P. Normand, president of the privy council, running in Three Rivers—have spent a very strenuous time since opening their campaigns. The conscription policy of the late government was the issue in their fights.

Hon. C. C. Balthazart, minister of marine, running in the St. Lawrence division of Montreal, has against him the only independent candidate to be nominated. Mrs. Roscoe Henderson, who is running on a labor ticket. He also is being opposed by H. M. Mather, a Liberal nominee.
