BRITISH YARD GROVS; BLAME THE AIR RAIDS

London, Aug. 8.—The standard British yard, which has been kept for thirty years in a sealed box under a staircase in the House of Commons, has, due to it is thought to vibrations resulting from the air raids, grown one ten-thousandth of an inch longer than the imperial standard kept in the Board of Trade. Investigation further showed that the standard British pound, made of platinum and kept in the same archives, has increased two and eighty-six-hundredths of a grain in weight.

CONNECTICUT UNEARTHED NEW AUTO THEFT GANG. Cars Stolen in New York Were Disguised and Sold There—Several Arrests Are Made. Hartford, Conn., Aug. 8.—For the second time within a year the state police have uncovered in Connecticut what they believe is a well organized system for receiving automobiles stolen in New York streets, disguising and reselling them in this state. Arrests were made in Colchester and Jewett City, a small village north of New London, and Superintendent of State Police Robert T. Hurley said he was expecting additional arrests in Windham County, in northeastern Connecticut. Three cars have been recovered in Colchester and two in Jewett City, all of them being high priced machines on which the engine serial numbers have ROBBERS IN CELLAR NEARLY KILL DRIVER Boldly Hold Him Up With Scores Nearer, But He Saves Firm's Money By Struggling. New York, Aug. 8.—A bold attack and robbery were made by two well-dressed thugs in the basement of 110 Chaucery street, Brooklyn, upon James Cook, a driver of one of the wagons of Dupan Brothers, bakers. As Cook stepped into the cellar to deliver coal, two men jumped upon him, and one hit him on the left side of the head with a piece of lead pipe. He struggled and cried for help and the robbers fled without getting the money he had collected on his route. Cook was found in the basement partly unconscious and bleeding. The wound in his head was dressed by an ambulance surgeon, who said that he had had a narrow escape from death. No trace was found of the robbers.

THREE RATTLESNAKES ATTACK GIRL IN SWAMP With Two Dogs Aiding Her She Holds Them Off Till Rescuer Shoots Them. Brown's Mills, N. J., Aug. 8.—Trapped on a point of land in a swamp near here by three huge rattlesnakes, Miss Carrie Pittman saved her life by her coolness and the aid of her two dogs until a rescuer came in response to her calls and shot two of the reptiles, the third and largest escaping. Miss Pittman had wandered into the swamp in search of huckleberries to a section where the largest rattler ever found in New Jersey recently was captured. "I was picking berries when I heard a snake rattle," said Miss Pittman in telling of her experience. "I looked around and saw a large rattler coiling to spring. I started to back away, when I heard another reptile and I saw a snake on the other side and a third under a log back of me. "I began to throw huckleberries at the snakes to attract their attention away from me. My two dogs, Ted and Mutt, began barking at the snakes. The dogs knew how to take care of themselves, but the snakes kept getting more excited. Twice two of the snakes were coiled ready to spring, but the berries and the dogs stopped them, but I thought they would get me before help came. James Gibberson, Jr., heard Miss Pittman's calls and ran to her aid. The smaller snake had thirteen rattles. The rattles had been torn from the tail of the other. Gibberson found twelve young rattlesnakes in the stomach of each, some dead from the shot, and the others he killed with a club, thus dispatching twenty-six rattles in less than five minutes.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—For the first time the Pullman Company has made public its system of naming cars. The names and the mystery connected with their selections have piqued public curiosity for forty years. "Sequence is the system. One name suggests another," says the Pullman Bulletin. Thus: "Ruth and Naomi, Venus and Adonis, Dewey and Manila." This picker was biblical. Next came some one with classical thought: "Helen and Paris, also Trojan, Iliad, Achilles, Hector, Ajax, Nestor and Ulysses and Penelope." Then came selections from Dickens characters, Kipling and his works, Walter Scott characters, Indian names, Ireland and its counties, Arthur and his round table knights. To titillate the palates of those who regret the passage of the 18th amendment, there are the cars: "Bourbon, Ryegate, Gordon, Manhattan, Mostelle, Burgundy, Tokay, Yvette, Cobus, Scotland and Bacchante. Hope is seen in the Wetmore, but, "Oh my prophetic soul!" There are also Aqua and Temperance.

BACK TO CLAY PIPES. Clay pipes are not to be counted into fashion again. These "honey" pipes were smoked by all classes before 1859 and were considered "the thing" till the arrival of briars. In Kate's reminiscences of the late fifties it occurs: "Milo's cutty pipes were quite the thing, and the selection by contents of a good one out of a fresh consignment packed in sawdust was eagerly watched by the Johns." These clay pipes are referred to in one of Sir Walter's novels as "the clay pipes of gentility." Milo used to charge twelve cents each for his clays, as the following burlesque published at that time would indicate: "Think not of meerschaum is that bowl away. Ye good enthusiasts, it is common clay. By Milo stamped, perchance by Milo's hand, And for a tizzy purchased in the Strand."
